HUB BANK MESSENGER ROBBED

HERE'S THE HEAD OF THE NEW HAVEN R. R.

EDWARD J. PEARSON
He's the president of a railroad that confesses it is not meeting the demands of the public.

NEW HAVEN ADMITS SERVICE IS ROTTEN

LACK OF ENGINES IS GIVEN AS REASON

The dilapidated, broken-down service was today officially admitted by the New Haven road, officially recognized by the State Department of Public Utilities and officially condemned by Mayor Edward T. Simoneau and a score of Marlboro citizens at a public hearing in the State House.

The admission that the service is bad was made by R. D. Fitzmaurice, the general superintendent of the New Haven. He said lack of motive power was to blame.

"The road is in bad shape and there is no use denying it," said Commissioner Everett E. Stone of the State Department of Public Utilities. "It is bad all over the system. The New Haven is just beginning to feel the real bad effects of the strike and is doing its best to overcome it."

"The strike is an alibi," declared City Solicitor Winfield Temple of Marlboro. "The bad service on the New Haven began long before the strike."

Mayor Simoneau declared that the service is wretched, and rapidly going from bad to worse.

The service was scathingly denounced by Charles F. Choate, Jr., of Westboro, son of Attorney Charles F. Choate, for many years general counsel of the New Haven, and who was in charge of its legal affairs when all New England was torn in strife by the merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine.

NO CO-OPERATION.

Choate joined with the Marlboro city officials and a score of men and women, many of them storegirls in Boston, who are repeatedly late for work in the morning and late reaching their Marlboro homes at night because of the poor service on the line between Framingham and Marlboro.

"There is no co-operation. There is lack of interest. There is lack of efficiency. The trains are invariably late."

Complaints are pouring into the Boston American about the miserable train service on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Is YOUR train service satisfactory, Mr or Mrs. or Miss Commuter? If not, please write, telephone to or call on the Railroad Service Bureau, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street.

The American is printing these tales of trouble, or as many as it can find space for.

Civic bodies are getting into definite action. The Norfolk Downs Improvement Association points the way by appointing a committee of protest to complain to the New Haven Railroad management.

The stories run along the same general lines:

Crippled engines.

Trains cancelled without notice.

Crowded cars, due to passengers waiting until crowds collect, then all piling on the first train ready.

There is talk of formal protest to the incoming Legislature, with demand for action that will bring results—meaning improved service.

NORFOLK DOWNS KICKS

Meanwhile the patrons of the road pray that Winter snows will hold off and fall lightly when they do fall. For it is inevitable, the passengers feel, that the engines, unable to make steam in cold weather now, will fail down on the job completely if they have to buck any snow.

The Norfolk Downs Improvement Association has appointed a committee to protest to New Haven railroad officials against the inefficient service.

This committee includes President French of the association, Mr. Aiken and W. H. Weston. Arrangements are being made to visit the local offices of the New Haven road at the South Station and make protest in person.

OUTDOES PARK STREET.

Norfolk Downs commuters come in to the South Station and go out on trains running between Boston and Braintree. The stations, going out, include Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston, Quincy Adams, then Braintree.

One of the popular home-going trains—popular under right conditions—is the 5:21. But, to quote an aggrieved Norfolk Downer today:

"There is no use in getting down to the South Station at 5 o'clock, for instance, so as to be in plenty of time for the train, because it is not made up and backed in on the track until the last minute. By that time a crowd has collected. The

WOMAN IS ACCUSED IN THEFT OF $7,176

Mrs. Minna Klain Berlow was arraigned today in Superior Court charged with larceny of $7,176.45 from her employers, the Oxford Dress Manufacturing Co., of No. 746 Washington street. She pleaded not guilty and was held in $3,000 bail. The alleged larcenies were committed on the following dates: December 30, 1920, $1,121.65; June 27, 1921, $1,175.37; December 30, 1921, $1,182.14; June 28, 1922, $2,461.17; and November 7, 1922, $1,535.10.

Mrs. Berlow, who is also known under two aliases, was employed as bookkeeper by the firm. Suspicion was directed against her, according to Inspector Conway, because she was making large and frequent deposits in Boston banks.

N. Y. BROKERS RAID PIGGLY WIGGLY

New York, Dec. 14.—The reported corner in Piggly Wiggly stock and the rumored bubble of Clarence Saunders president of the company, by which he hoped to "break Wall Street," suffered a rude collapse today when the speculative element on the New York Stock Exchange launched a drive against that stock which forced it down to 44¾, a ten point break.

Saunders arrived in New York City last week from Nashville, preceded by reports that he had come with a million dollars with the express purpose of "breaking Wall Street."

Saunders was in this city only one day, eluded all interviewers and checked out as silently as he arrived.

HARDING'S SISTER AIDS HOOTCH RAID

Washington, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Caroline Harding Votaw, sister of the President, turned prohibition enforcement officer today and caused the arrest of an alleged bootlegger within half a dozen blocks of the White House.

Upon information furnished by Mrs. Votaw revenue agents raided No. 902 Twelfth street and arrested Joseph D. Hanning. Twelve pints of rye whiskey were seized.

10 HELD IN PROBE OF CAMP THEFT

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 14 (By International News Service).—"Jake" Krause, millionaire junk dealer, and nine others were served with warrants to appear before the United States Commissioner at Freeport this afternoon in connection with the Camp Grant equipment theft scandal. Issuance of the warrants followed an investigation by Federal authorities over a period of six months.

14 SCALDED TO DEATH IN WRECK

Houston, Tex., Dec. 14.—A recheck today by railroad investigators placed the toll of last night's Southern Pacific wreck at Humble, seventeen miles from here, at fourteen, of whom four were white men.

The injured, seventeen were still receiving medical attention at hospitals here. The majority are negroes. All were victims of scalding.

The wreck occurred when a passenger train struck a switch engine that had "drifted" on to the main line.

HUNT TAXI AND LOST PEARLS

Back Bay Woman's $2,000 Gems Vanish During Brief Ride in Cab

A string of 382 matched pearls with a diamond and emerald clasp vanished today from the neck of a Boston woman as if by magic.

Mrs. William W. Caswell, Back Bay society woman, lost them in a taxicab somewhere between No. 118 Beacon street and her home at No. 251 Beacon street.

When she stepped into the taxi at No. 118 Beacon street, where she had been visiting, she says, the gems were safely about her neck. When she stepped into her home they were gone. She did not have a single clew to give to the police.

The necklace is valued at more than $2,000. They were secured by a safety clasp, so it was believed impossible for them to fall off. Yet Mrs. Caswell does not remember that anyone came near enough to her to unfasten the clasp.

The police have begun a city-wide search for the taxi-driver, in the hope that the string may have been and scattered the pearls about the taxi floor.

YOUTH IS SLAIN IN NORTHEND

Shot Dead as Crowds Pass; Killing Follows on the Heels of Robbery

A murder and a robbery, occurring within twenty minutes of each other and believed to be connected, threw Hanover street, in the crowded Italian quarter, into an uproar today.

The robbery occurred at Hanover street and Webster avenue, the murder at Hanover and Union, several hundred yards away.

A man named Albert Bruno, who said he lives at Randolph, Mass., is under arrest, charged with murder. He was captured after a chase during which he threatened to kill anybody who attempted to molest him.

DEATH ENDS ARGUMENT.

Passersby noticed the two young men—neither is over twenty—in a heated argument. They stood in the snow, wrangling about something involving money. That much was established by persons who witnessed the killing.

One of the young men suddenly drew an automatic pistol from his pocket.

He was quicker on the draw, but not so fast on the trigger. Before he had a chance to fire, the other lad had shot twice.

The body of the victim tumbled to the ground. The automatic rolled to the gutter. With his gun in his

100 P. C. DIVIDEND BY PACIFIC MILLS

The Pacific Mills Corporation will increase its capital from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 so as to declare a 100 per cent. stock dividend, according to an announcement today.

Directors of the company put into effect a 20 per cent. wage cut on March 27. This led to a strike of upwards of 10,000 employes at the Lawrence mills. The workers did not return until August 17, when agreement was made to restore the old wage scale beginning October 1. The company has a number of Southern mills.

SNOWSTORM PUTS END TO COLD SNAP

Snow fell today in Boston and most parts of New England. The weatherman promised increasing southerly winds. The temperature will mount somewhat. The coldest spot in the New England district today is Greenville, Me., where it is four above zero.

In New York snow laid a blanket on streets and housetops in twenty minutes. Traffic on surface and elevated lines was hampered, but not seriously. Lake shipping was reported held up by a severe blizzard.

CROWDED LIKE CATTLE, COMMUTERS COMPLAIN

"Then, after all have jammed aboard, you never know when the train is going to start. They have to wait for engines apparently. They start late and they suffer delays so that the run to Norfolk Downs, which should take twelve to fifteen minutes, takes from one-half to three-quarters of an hour.

"Here is another very bad thing. The 10:24 to Braintree at night is a busy train. There will be four or five coaches open when the train is made up at the South Station and two or three locked coaches back of the open ones. When the open coaches are filled, so that passengers are standing up in the aisles, the trainmen will unlock the door of the next car back. But they don't do it until passengers fairly clamor at them.

"When that car is jammed, they will unlock another car and keep shrieking along that way, instead of opening enough in the first place for all to get seats comfortably.

"I read in the American where the lateness of trains is even getting to be a joke among trainmen. I guess that is right. I have heard them myself. I don't mean that the conductors and brakemen are to blame for the late trains. But they seem to know that delays are so common now that the service is a joke."

Commuters from Pemberton, Hull and Nantasket, who depend upon train service after the boat schedule suspends for the Winter, are equally wrathful.

FORCED TO LEAVE EARLY.

A Pemberton commuter complained today of lateness of trains on the main line through Nantasket Junction. Passengers from the Hull Summer stations use the electric which connects at Nantasket Junction with the steam trains on the main line between Boston and Plymouth.

"The trouble is," said this commuter, "that when we get to Nantasket Junction the train up from Plymouth is usually late. You can depend on being one-half to three-quarters of an hour late into Boston three or four days a week. I work near the South Station. The train due in about twenty minutes of nine would, if it arrived on time, be just right for me. But I can't rely on that being on time, so I have to take the train before that one and get in Boston before I need to.

"There is often delay just as the trains are entering the South Station yard; also delay in the out-bound trains leaving for Nantasket Junction. A man never knows what time he is going to get home at night.

HELD UP IN YARD

"When trains stop in the yard and wait, passengers, wishing to get to work, will sometimes get out and walk the rest of the way into the station. Wednesday morning a girl who debarked in the yard with other passengers slipped and was hurt, although I do not know how seriously."

An Atlantic commuter complained today thus:

"It's terrible—the lack of service on the New Haven road. The trouble is shortage of engines—engines, at least, that are in running shape.

PACKED LIKE CATTLE.

"This means that while trains may be made up on schedule time at the South Station, you can't tell when they pull out. For example, I like to ride home on the 5:24 at night. But it goes out any time up to 6 o'clock or so.

"Same with the 5:51. That will pull out about 6:15, which means that passengers who have come for the 6:13, or the 6:20, grab the belated 5:51, making a terrific jam. You ought to see them massed along the platform any evening, waiting for these South Shore trains. When we get aboard we are packed in like cattle on account of passengers for later trains taking the first one that goes out.

"Why, they can't start a train out until an engine comes in Maulin, another train and is released for duty to take the next outward train.

FEARS COMING OF SNOW.

"What we South Shore commuters will do when a few inches of snow comes I don't know. With clean rails now the engines don't seem to be able to make steam enough in cold weather. Give us a snowfall, enough to make a little more trouble, then see the commuters who get home when they get there."

Fields Corner has its accumulating grievances. One of its commuters expressed himself thus:

"Here is a sample. I arrived at Fields Corner railroad station Tuesday morning at 8:20 to take the 8:31 to Boston. The 8:20, which I had missed, as I supposed, was standing at the station, minus an engine.

"Passengers were debarking to go by trolley. I walked to Harrison square station to see what I could get. I met an engine and single coach going back to Fields Corner to haul in the 8:20. Meanwhile, as I learned from others who came along, the 8:31 had pulled up behind the 8:16 at Field's Corner and was waiting for the stalled train to get out of the way.

"The engine, with one coach, ran down to Fields Corner and tried to couple to the cars of the 8:16, but for some reason could not make the coupling. So the conductor had the engine and coach run back to Harrison square. There he telephoned. Then he told a lot of angry commuters that he would make a trip with the engine and one coach to South Station, which he did. I boarded the coach and arrived at the South Station at 9:15. Fine service."

8 MILES, 30 MINUTES LATE.

The train due to leave Quincy at 9:25 a.m. for South Station on a recent morning started at 10:05 and arrived at the South Station one-half hour late for the eight-mile run.

Another aggravating example, related by a Fields Corner commuter, was this:

"I boarded a train for Fields Corner at the South Station. We waited ten minutes. The conductor said: 'This in the 6:33. The 6:04 on the next track goes out ahead of us.' I changed to the other train. It started, ran about 200 yards out to the trainyard, stopped, backed into the trainshed again, waited, started out again, stopped, backed up a second time, then finally started and kept going. I was one and one-half hours late getting home.

More Service on New Haven; Crack Train is 2 Hours Late

More New Haven service!

The Merchants Limited, the "crack" train, arrived at South Station exactly two and one-half hours late, filled with passengers, exhausted after a mean journey.

A few minutes later the New York Shore Line train arrived one hour and forty-five minutes late. The latter came in under its own power while the former was towed by another locomotive which came to its assistance at West Mansfield.

"Low steam" was the reason given in both cases.

ably late," young Choate declared.

"You mean no co-operation among the men," said Commissioner Stone.

"I do not," said Choate. "I know the conductors, trainmen and baggagemen. They are capable, pleasant, hard-working men. The trouble is that the 'people behind' take no interest and when the trains are late the men naturally say, 'What are you going to do about it?'

"This has become a matter of complete indifference. President Pearson said that he would make this matter a personal matter, but if he has done anything to improve it, what he has done is not noticeable."

HELD OFF ON PETITION.

"We are always late," said A. L. Kendall. "We often miss the Boston connection at Framingham and men and women scramble out of the train and run down the tracks in the hope of catching the train."

The 7 o'clock train out of Marlboro left the morning at 7:30," said Representative William H. Hannagan. "The 8:30 train left at 9:27. The trains rarely leave within fifteen minutes of starting time.

"To show that we have tried to be fair with the New Haven road, I want to state that a petition protesting against the service was given to me by the passengers to file with this department several months ago, but the New Haven asked me to hold off and to fix up all complaints of this kind with them. I did hold off, but the service has been worse instead of better.

"They said weeks ago that one of their engines had frozen up. That seemed difficult to believe in relatively warm weather. The people are indignant."

BLAMES STRIKES.

R. C. Nyman, speaking for the employes of the Dennison Manufacturing Company, said the New Haven holds its Marlboro-bound train, with 274 passengers, at Framingham to wait a long time for a train coming up from Taunton and Mansfield with three passengers.

"From forty to sixty employes are invariably late for work," he said, "causing the loss of their wages, the holding up work in the shop and the consequent loss of wages to many other employes who must wait for them before they can begin operations. It's no fun to be late for work in the morning and to be late home at night. It makes a pretty long day for the working man and woman."

"I guess you're right," said Commissioner Stone. "The road is in bad shape, but is doing the best it can. There was the shop strike, the coal strike and heavy business."

It was at that point that the City Solicitor declared the strike was "an alibi."

"We have been told for a long time that they were doing the best they could," said Mayor Simoneau. "The service is bad on every train. It is wretched."

100 A MONTH.

"The motive power is not in good condition," said General Superintendent Fitzmaurice. "But we are on the road to improvement. One hundred locomotives have been let out to private work and we expect all of them back in good shape this month.

"We have been guaranteed the delivery of 100 locomotives a month in January, February and March. We are running full-handed in our own shops, except for boilermen. In fact, we have 1,000 more at work than before the strike."

What Do You Think of N. Y., N. H. & H. Service?

THE Boston American has received many complaints relative to the suburban service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford. Stories of engines unable to make or keep up steam, of broken equipment, of trains hours late in reaching their destinations, have been sent in. Many of these complaints tell of almost unbearable conditions.

The Boston American is making a thorough investigation and will publish the results. If you live on any suburban line of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad, you can help in this investigation by letting us know your experience.

Is your service satisfactory? If so, tell us. If not, let us know, citing instances where your community has received bad service.

SAYS KLAN IS "USED" TO FIGHT U. S. LABOR

London, Dec. 14 (By International News Service).—The American delegate to the Third Internationale at Moscow, M. Pulman, alleged in a speech that American capitalists are using the American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan as "instruments in their offensive against labor," according to a Moscow dispatch in the Daily Mail.

The American delegate declared also that capitalists are "using the economic crisis as a vehicle in their campaign against the workers."

Pulman said Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, had "established friendly relations with the American Legion."

A short time before the murder Frank W. Barney, a messenger of the Fourth Atlantic National Bank, was robbed a few blocks away.

In reporting the matter to the police Barney told of being jostled by two men, of feeling in his pocket a moment later and of discovering that $200 in cash and checks had been taken from him.

His description of the two men he believes picked his pocket tallies with that of Bruno and the man he killed. The police believe the two men picked Barney's pocket and then quarreled over division of the loot.

IT'S A LIGHT day for news, fellow citizens.

Clemenceau went home, saying his ghost would come back to see us. It would be a cheerful, welcome ghost. In Clemenceau the Americans saw a first class type of the fighting Frenchman: strong, patriotic, eloquent and determined into old age. There is no better type of man. He considers France the centre of the universe, with a claim on all creation, and you respect him for it.

THEY HAVE "needle demons" in Paris. Queer creatures, men only, of course, that go about promiscuously pricking women with needles that are poisoned, and cause intense suffering. Last year Paris had an epidemic of "slashers." They cut women's fur coats and gowns with knives, inflicting no physical injury. Here we have had idiots or maniacs called "hair snippers," that cut braids of hair from school girls. Why is it that there is no such queer mania among WOMEN? They are really the better balanced half of the race.

THERE ARE COUNTERFEIT fifty dollar bills in circulation. Look out. Fifty millions of Americans need not worry about the counterfeits. They never had, never will have, fifty dollars at one time.

WHEN YOU GO to the Zoological Garden, you see that the animals belong to different periods. The lizard is a dinosaur on a small scale, and dates back 30,000,000 years. The horse, with his many toes simplified into one hoof, represents millions of years of evolution beyond the lizard.

As in the Zoological Garden, so it is among nations. When you see Greece shooting members of a cabinet because Greece lost a war, you know what period that belongs to.

New Dr. Baltasar Brum, President of the good Republic of Uruguay agrees to fight a pistol duel with Dr. Herrera, who was in his legation in Washington. The President challenges Herrera. That also belongs some time back to the day when Alexander Hamilton was killed.

LATIN RACES, including the French, tell you that without duelling honor is in danger. We once thought so here, and they used to think it in England. Now we send for a policeman, and honor doesn't seem to suffer. The saying, "A gentleman will not insult me; the other kind of man can't insult me," takes care of the honor.

IN LONDON yesterday you could buy 20,000,000 Russian rubles in paper for one American paper dollar. That shows a difference in "paper." Before the war, those twenty million rubles were worth ten million dollars in gold.

Taking On New Office Furniture —Are You Off With the Old?

Buying new desks and chairs and tables means moving out the old. If they are good and usable, don't move them into a storeroom where their services will be lost.

SPYING HUSBAND PLAYS 'PEEPING TOM' ROLE

PHONED HIS MATE TO 'DRAW SHADES'

Brookline Man Says He Sent Wife Postal Card in "Good-Natured Sarcasm"

Frank Hamilton played the role of "Peeping Tom" and so discovered his wife entertaining a man in his shirt sleeves at their home on Stedman street, Brookline.

Then he hastened to a nearby drug store and telephoned this advice:

"If you are going to be indiscreet, please pull down the shades."

Hamilton, an insurance broker, today described in detail this "Peeping Tom" experience while testifying in Suffolk Court at the hearing on his petition for divorce.

PEEPED IN WINDOW.

During cross-examination by Attorney E. M. Shanley, witness said:

"On March 14 I was on Stedman street and I happened to pass by her house. The lights were bright and the shades were up. I suppose I might be called a 'Peeping Tom' for what I did.

"Nevertheless, I looked through the window and saw Mrs. Hamilton's head and a man with her who had his coat and vest off. Just then the light was turned off, but from the light of the hall I saw two persons leave the room.

"I walked around on a side street —our house was on the corner— and there looked into another room where the shades were up. From the light in the hall I could see two persons enter the room. I was greatly disturbed."

GOOD-NATURED SARCASM.

The cross-examination disclosed that, long after their separation, while he was in New Hampshire vacationing, he sent his wife a post card on which was written:

"Am afraid you have missed me and worried about me. Hope you are enjoying yourself. Try and be pleasant."

Attorney Shanley: "Why did you write this to the woman you had separated from?"

A.—I suppose you can call that a bit of good natured sarcasm on my part.

It was brought out that Hamilton had called on quite a few women, including the "two Keating ladies of Audubon road" and "Miss Millward" who rooms with Mrs. DuBois.

Attorney Samuel L. Ballen, counsel for Hamilton, asked: "At any time did you talk with Mrs. Hamilton about her first husband? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said she was sorry she had lost him and wished she had not been so foolish as to separate. She said if she had a chance she would like to get him back.

Boston Doctor Accused of Perjury

PEACE IN ERIN HOPED FOR BY CHRISTMAS

Dublin, Dec. 14.—Three Republicans were killed and many others were captured in fights with Free State troops near Clonmel today.

Dublin, Dec. 14. (By the Associated Press).—Talk of peace between the factions in Ireland is increasingly heard as Christmas approaches. Action taken by the new Senate of the Free State Tuesday in appointing a committee to work for the immediate cessation of hostilities had developed some indications that a considerable section of the Republican party is willing to treat for peace and that the rank and file is moving in that direction.

The summoning of all the Sinn Fein clubs in Dublin County to debate the question was pointed to as significant. Although the clubs are composed of both treaty supporters and Republicans, it was the Republicans who sent out the press notifications for Sunday's meeting.

The unwillingness of the irregulars to au rrender their arms may prove an obstacle to peace.

It is pointed out that peace between the British and the Irish was delayed by the same difficulty and was only obtained when the British waived their demand for the surrender of arms.

Resolutions of public bodies in favor of peace are instanced as indicating that public feeling is tending to favor accomodation between the two parties.

London, Dec. 14.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Dublin says that delegates of the Sinn Fein branches in Dublin city and county will confer here Sunday with the object of establishing peace.

British Soldiers Leaving Ireland

Dublin, Dec. 14 (By the Associated Press).—With bands playing, banners flying and bayonets fixed, three British regiments marched out of Dublin today and embarked at the North Wall for England. This marks the beginning of the final stage of the British evacuation of Free State territory, which will be completed by next week.

This morning the barracks and various other buildings occupied by the British were handed over to the Free State troops. The buildings included the former vice-regal lodge, now the residence of the Governor-General.

GERMANY NEAR COLLAPSE, SAYS PREMIER LAW

London, Dec. 14. (By International News Service).—Great Britain is opposed to French occupation of the German Ruhr, Premier A. Bonar Law told the House of Commons today.

He said, "Great Britain cannot pay her debt to the United States and forget her own debtors entirely."

After expressing belief that British and French would be able to co-operate, he said:

"But Britain cannot make concessions which her debtors expect unless trade gets better. Britain's condition is serious right now."

Former Premier Asquith, former Premier Lloyd George and Ramsay MacDonald demanded a definite statement on a reparations policy, but the premier said he could not make one.

"Germany is near collapse," said Premier Law. "Britain has restored herself at the expense of the taxpayers.

"Britain sympathizes with France. France needs payments, but international conferences cannot continue indefinitely.

"Britain cannot view with equanimity any action which will make a final settlement more difficult."

This last statement was made while discussing the French demand for occupation of the Ruhr.

The Premier paid tribute to America, saying:

"The United States entered the war when Great Britain's resources were exhausted. She entered without any thought of profit."

U. S. Board to Urge Cut in Debt Interest

Washington, Dec. 14 (By International News Service).—After forthcoming negotiations with Great Britian and other foreign debtors, the American Debt Commission will ask Congress to authorize a relaxation of rates of interest payments on debts due the United States, it was learned authoritatively today.

SCHOONER SETH SMITH LOSES SAILS IN GALE

Rockland, Me., Dec. 14.—The three-masted schooner, Seth W. Smith, reported in a dangerous position last night at Whitehead, fifteen miles west of here, was taken in tow today by the cable ship Pequot and was being brought into port. The schooner did not strike, but all sails were carried away in the heavy wind. Captain George S. Summers of Boston and his crew of seven remained aboard. The schooner is owned by George S. Curran of Calais.

RESCUE 30 AS VESSEL SINKS

Tramp Steamer Saves Crew of French Trawler in Furious Gale

Captain Marcussen and the officers and crew of the Scandinavian tramp steamer Neils Neilsen, in port today from Rangemouth, Eng., with a cargo of coal, told thrilling stories of a Winter passage of the North Atlantic.

The vessel had been staggering through storm and stress for three weeks, had rescued thirty men from perishing and bore marks of her punishment when Boston light was picked up by the officer on watch today. Everyone from Captain Marcussen to the fo'castle "Betty" was worn out with toil and anxiety, and glad to make port for a few days of quiet.

The rescue took place last Thursday, 180 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland. The old French fishing trawler Augustus le Blonde was hooking back to Dieppe after ten months fishing on the Grand Banks, the thirty men on board bound home for the Christmas holidays.

IN SINKING CONDITION.

She ran into rough weather and began taking in water. The men worked incessantly at the pumps, but the water gained. One sea smashed the stem of the vessel, which let in more water. Another tore off the hatch covers and boarding seas poured down the hatch.

The Auguste le Blonde had a pitiful little wireless outfit on board, so weak that vessels in sight could not get it clearly. A fisherman with some knowledge of radio operation pounded out futile messages on the machine, but no one heard them.

Just as the Frenchmen were about to take to their boats the Neils Neilsen hove in sight, laboring in a stiff gale and heavy sea. Captain Marcussen saw that the trawler was sinking and went to her aid.

A boat had been launched from the trawler, and twelve men were in it. The boat was rowed to the leeward side of the steamer, but smashed against steel sides of the vessel, as she rolled almost rails under the trough of the sea. Lines were thrown over and the fishermen saved by that means.

RESCUE ENTIRE CREW

The steamer's lifeboat was launched with difficulty and for nearly two hours the boat crew toiled before all were safe on board the freighter. They had hardly got their boat back in its chocks when the trawler broke in two amidships and both ends sank.

Although laden with coal, the Neils Neilsen was short of fuel. The waves breaking over the vessel made it impossible to break open the hatches, so Captain Marcussen set a course for Halifax, to re-fuel and provision his ship. He arrived there the next day and stayed only long enough to accomplish that purpose and land the Frenchmen.

On the way down from Halifax the Neils Neilsen again ran into gales which further delayed her arrival here.

GANNA WALSKA BUYS THEATRE IN PARIS

THOMSON SHY, SAYS FIANCEE

Wedding of Noted Inventor and Miss Hovey to Be Quiet Affair

Though Prof. Elihu Thomson, King of Electricity, has 500 inventions to his credit, he has never found a way of insulating Cupid's darts.

The learned inventor and acting president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology was almost demure in commenting on the announcement of his engagement to Miss Clarissa Hovey.

"There's nothing very spectacular about a man falling in love and having a lovely l dy honor him by promising to be his wife," he said. "Because I have three grown sons, and am not as young as I once was, is no reason why I shouldn't find happiness. There is no mystery about our courtship and impending marriage."

IDEAL COMPANIONS.

Miss Hovey, who lives at No. 77 Huntington avenue, is a clerk at the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company. She denied that she was twenty-five years old, as was originally stated, but refused to be more explicit regarding her age.

"The professor and I are not children. He is sixty-nine years old, but he has the vivacity and enthusiasm for life of a much younger man. Age is not measured in years these days, and though there is a great gulf between my age and my finance's, we are so congenial and have so many things in common that we are ideal companions," said Miss Hovey. The smiling fiancee of the electrical wizard declared that no definite date has been set for the marriage ceremony.

"It is enough for us at the moment that we are engaged. I think, however, that we will be married soon, but the wedding will not be an elaborate one, because Professor Thomson is a very shy man," she explained with a becoming blush.

HIS PET HOBBY.

It was through Professor Thomson's pet hobby, photography, that the romance began. Miss Hovey is a photographer of some note, specializing in autochrome work.

Professor Thomson is the president and the founder of the General Electric Company, the largest producer of electrical machinery in the country. Among the 500 electrical inventions for which he is responsible was the first dynamo. It recently came to light that Professor Thomson invented the principle of radio transmission fully twelve years before the German scientist Heinrich Hertz made his announcements that brought about the radio telephone.

Professor Thomson and his bride will live in the fine old residence at Swampscott, they announced.

"We probably will have a conventional wedding, but we cannot promise not to elope quietly at the last moment." Miss Hovey hinted shyly.

CONSULT HARDING OF BUREAU CHANGES

Washington, Dec. 13.—President Harding today met the joint commission on departmental reorganization, preparatory to submission of a completed report to Congress recommending sweeping realignments in governmental departments and bureaus. One of the chief obstacles remaining to be met was the question of consolidating the War and Navy Departments in a department of defence. Another unreconciled difference was the proposed transfer of several bureaus in the Agricultural and Interior Departments.

N. H. GRANGE AGAINST WOMEN'S 48-HR. LAW

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 14.—Opposition to the 48-hour law for women and minors in industry was declared in a resolution adopted by the New Hampshire State Grange today. Enforcement of the prohibition law was favored unanimously. The Grange deemed passage of an act for adjusted compensation for veterans of the World War to be inexpedient and again went on record as unanimously opposed to daylight saving.

PROF. THOMSON AND HIS FIANCEE.

Miss Clarissa Hovey, who is to marry the electrical wizard, met him through his pet hobby, photography.

SAY DAUGHERTY SLEUTHS TRAIL CONGRESSMEN

Washington, Dec. 14.—Charges that operatives of the Department of Justice had shadowed members of Congress who attacked Attorney General Daugherty were made and denied today at the hearing before the House Judiciary committee on impeachment charges against Mr. Daugherty.

Asserting that Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, and Representatives Woodruff of Michigan and Johnson of South Dakota, Republicans, had been shadowed by such operatives, Jackson H. Ralston, counsel for Representative Keller, author of the impeachment charges, asked the committee to obtain from the Department of Justice the names and the daily reports of the operatives.

DENY SLEUTHS USED.

"Now impossible in the face of our denial that anything like that was done, to produce any such papers," said Paul Howland, counsel for Mr. Daugherty.

When Mr. Ralston declared that the accuracy of the denial would be the subject of future discussion, Mr. Howland replied that if proof were offered before the committee any document and papers relating to it would be produced if they existed.

PAPERS ARE MISSING.

As the committee assembled it developed that the file of papers relating to William J. Burns, sent to President Harding by A. F. Macauly, an American living at Toronto, Canada, had been mislaid over night. Mr. Howland said he had been unable to locate the file and the official stenographers said it had not come into their possession.

TESTIFIED SLAYER WAS MAD

Dr. O'Brien of Dorchester Is Summonsed to Explain to District Attorney

Dr. Joseph J. O'Brien of No. 2175 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, has been notified by Inspector Pierce of the district attorney's office to surrrender himself to the Superior Criminal Court of Suffolk County to answer an indictment charging perjury at the trial of Frank E. Small, a Dorchester druggist, on September 29.

O'Brien was summoned as a government witness, but was used by the defence. He testified that when he saw Bartlett about midnight of the day he was arrested at the Field's Corner police station he was pacing up and down the cell, screaming and raving and tearing his hair.

Policemen who were there at the time dispute the statement of Dr. O'Brien.

There is a statute that provides a special penalty for perjury in capital cases. It provides that any person convicted of perjury may be sentenced for a term of years or for life imprisonment.

'TIGER' OPPOSES SEIZURE OF RUHR

Paris, Dec. 14 (By International News Service Radio). — Although Former Premier Georges Clemenceau is far from France, returning on the liner Paris, he made his political influence felt by wireless today.

Francois Crucy, correspondent of the Petit Parisien, accompanying "The Tiger," sent an interview from the Paris which created a sensation in the Chamber of Deputies.

The former Premier made the following points:

1.—Opposed occupation of the Ruhr by France.

2.—Urged ratification of the Washington naval conference treaty by France.

3.—Approved a proposal that President Harding arbitrate Anglo-French differences.

4.—Warned France to make costly sacrifices to retain American friendship.

The radiogram quoted M. Clemenceau as saying:

"I am opposed to the occupation of the Ruhr. Perhaps there was a time when such a policy of force would have had useful results, but it is too late now. Occupation of the Ruhr causes me worry and apprehensions.

"We have reached the extreme limit of committing faults. We cannot afford to make such a mistake against American and British opinion as seizing the Ruhr."

great Russian, who, by the way, is by far the best actor now in America, as well as a great singer.

Chaliapin worked for twenty-five years, lived economically and saved three million rubles, worth a million and a half dollars in gold. His plan was to establish a school in which young men and women of talent would be changed from promising raw material into real artists, where he might live, in his old age, surrounded by youth generously encouraged.

An artist, not a business man, Chaliapin kept his money in Russian rubles. Now his fortune, once worth a million and a half of our gold dollars, would be worth in actual money less than twenty cents. You could not start a music school with that.

The Russian ruble warns those who plan a new world that there is nothing theoretical about money.

THE ENGLISH pound has been steadily climbing in value. Americans are supposed to be purchasing English money for some big transaction. That would help. England is getting farther and farther away from the European mix-up, concentrating on her own affairs. That helps more.

FOR THE PRESENT France agrees not to seize more German territory. The article written by Lloyd George is responsible for that.

The government at Washington, instead of attending to American affairs, wastes energy on "how can peace be restored to Europe." One thing will restore it and nothing else. That is an agreement between France and Germany, based on justice and common sense. The French say such an agreement is impossible. The Germans say the French don't want such an agreement. While that mood lasts nobody else can do anything except get his finger pinched in the door. One pinch cost us a hundred thousand million dollars, one way and another. That ought to be enough for a while.

SECRET PROBE STARTS ANEW IN HALL CASE

New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 14.—Two new and unusual developments today in the Hall-Mills case tend to bear out the statements of local and State authorities that the investigation of the double murder is by no means at an end.

The developments were: The visit to Somerville of Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker to address the September Grand Jury, which he dismissed later, and the discovery that a secret inquiry along entirely different lines is being conducted both in New Brunswick and in Somerville.

Azariah M. Beekman, prosecutor of Somerset county, said that he had not expected Justice Parker, and that the latter had come to Somerville without any request from him. He added that he did not know whether the visit had anything to do with the Hall-Mills case, and he was not present when Justice Parker addressed the panel. None of the jurors would talk about Justice Parker's remarks.

The new panel will be called next Tuesday. It is generally understood that the case will be placed before that body and that the members of the prosecutor's staff of both counties then will offer some new evidence.

Bearing out the statements of Chief Detective David Proudfoot-Stricker of Middlesex and other officials that the case was being followed up diligently, the information that investigators were working in certain parts of this city was verified today.

Interest, however, picked up today because several persons had been "interviewed" and some investigators were hard at work along new lines of inquiry.

This investigation has its centre in the underworld here, some of whose denizens were engaged in earnest discussion with the new investigators.

Prosecutor Mott is still ill and he has evidently done no work on the case since its collapse before the Somerset Grand Jury three weeks ago.

GIRL REGAINS VOICE LOST FIVE YEARS AGO

Newark, Dec. 14—Mary Majsky lost her voice five years ago, when she was four years old, from an attack of black diphtheria. Today through the surgical skill of Dr. Henry Orton of the Presbyterian Hospital in Newark, she began to talk, and, for the first time in five years, breathed normally through a rubber pipe.

Her voice, when it returned, began as the lisping of a baby of four years, but, as the day wore on, it became stronger and it is said she was talking almost as well as any girl of her age.

Woodrow Wilson to Publish Memoirs It Is Reported

Washington, Dec. 14.—Woodrow Wilson may tell the world his own inside story, now that he has abandoned his law partnership with Bainbridge Colby. Despite the attempts of Joseph P. Tumulty and Ray Stannard Baker to do the job, some of the former President's friends have persisted in the belief that Mr. Wilson would publish his memoirs.

It is pointed out that since the Tumulty and Baker "inside stories," Lloyd George, Franklin K. Lane and others have shed some light into corners so far not illumined. Just as Mr. Wilson might desire.

300 GIRLS IN ACADEMY GET FIRE SCARE

Three hundred girls in the main dormitory of the Academy of the Assumption left their beds, dressed and marched to the lower hall at midnight when fire was discovered in an adjoining building on the academy grounds in Wellesley Hills.

The building was a sort of combination storehouse, heating plant and greenhouse, and it was for a time feared that flames would spread to the dormitory. The fire was kept under control, however, and the girls did not leave the building.

Fire Lieutenant Lyons and fireman McDonald were slightly cut about the legs by falling glass, and were treated by physicians. Damage to the building is estimated at $4,000.

WOMAN HE JILTED TELLS HOW EX-KAISER ASKED HER TO WE

FRAU VON ROCHOW DESCRIBES PROPOSAL AT DOORN

Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—"I lost my husband about the same time the Kaiserin died (April, 1921)," said Frau Gabriele von Rochow, telling her story today of her love match with Wilhelm Hohenzollern.

"Shortly afterwards, the Kaiser wrote, begging me to visit him at Doorn. He said he was terribly lonely and wished to talk with me as an old friend.

"At Doorn I found Wilhelm terribly sad, but he brightened up. We took long walks in the park. He talked to me for hours of all his thoughts and feelings.

DEFIES CAMARILLA

"As always, I told him with absolute frankness what I thought of his ideas and actions. The court camarilla, which had always hated anyone taking this attitude, viewed my presence with growing anger.

"On the surface they crawled in the dust to me, as they did to him, but I soon knew they had sworn war to the knife.'

"Towards the end of August I began to notice a change in Wilhelm's attitude.

"I noticed he gazed at me lingeringly without speaking.

"This made me uneasy and I asked him to explain. An abstract happened along and the Kaiser weakly whispered: 'Please let me take tea with you in your drawing room tomorrow afternoon. I have something important to say to you.'

"In the hours intervening I was more uneasy than ever. I knew the message. I had read it in his eyes. It was: 'I love you.'

WOMAN IN DOUBT.

"I did not know what answer to make when his lips should speak. I was not a young woman taken off my feet. I was not vain, nor ambitious to exploit that love; I was not flattered by its prospects or its consequences. I was a mature woman, looking back upon a life full of happiness, with two daughters—yes, a grandmother! But I knew Wilhelm and his impulsive, intensive nature. I had been privileged to bring cheer into his solitude and helped him forget his tragic fate. I felt unconsciously he had gradually idealized himself with the feeling that I was 'the only woman in the world.'

"Promptly at 5 o'clock next afternoon (August 22) Wilhelm entered my parlor. He greeted me warmly, kissing both my hands. His face was unusually grave but his eyes showed a sparkle.

"His whole bearing was youthful; his step elastic. I trembled inwardly because I knew that within a few minutes I was fated to give him a bitter disappointment.

AN ABRUPT PROPOSAL.

"He did not beat about the bush, but straightway said: 'Mackgraefin, (a pet name) I have come to ask you to be my wife.'

"I tried to interrupt him. As I raised my hand as if to bid him cease, I felt a sickening sensation. In that fraction of a second it seemed as if all the heartache, torture and torment of subsequent months flashed afore me like a sinister premonitor. He continued: 'I cannot live without you. You are the only being on earth who can make life bearable for me. You must marry me.'

Frau Gabriele, touched to the heart, finally consented to become the Kaiser's bride, and then began a battle by the members of the "Kaiser's court" at Doorn to have the engagement broken. They enlisted members of the Hohenzollern family and ultimately were successful.

New Color Scheme Helps Rum Men Escape Law

Fredericton, N. B., Dec. 14.—Officials have uncovered some of the methods used by persons running liquor into the United States over the roads. The traffic is said to be on an organized basis.

The run from St. John to New York is made on a schedule calling for a three-day trip. Automobiles have been observed to be very different in appearance on their return from New York and some of those engaged in the traffic have disclosed that it is the practice to apply a new color scheme to each car while it is in New York, using a paint which dries overnight.

The carrying of liquor is legal until it reaches the boundary.

WANAMAKER BODY LIES IN STATE

Philadelphia, Dec. 14.—Thousands of persons representing virtually every walk in life did homage today at the bier of John Wanamaker, whose body lay in state from 9 o'clock until noon in Bethany Presbyterian Church, where the famous merchant had worshipped since boyhood.

Many celebrated persons are here to officiate as honorary pallbearers or to attend the funeral services this afternoon. The services at both the church and the Wanamaker mausoleum in the cemetery of St. James the Less will be private.

Simplicity will mark the last rites for the merchant prince. The hymns that were his lifelong favorites will be his musical requiem. They are "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

MYSTERY GIRL TAKES POISON IN ALLSTON

Why did Ethel Anderson, twenty-eight, take such an amount of veronal that she collapsed today in an Allston lunch room?

Why does she refuse to tell police or hospital authorities anything about herself?

What is the secret of her despair?

Police of Brighton station are striving to learn something more about her. They frankly admit they are baffled by the strange manners of the girl.

Lying on a cot in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, she has wrapped herself in mystery which is deepened by the fact that nothing on her clothes or in her possession would give the slightest help in making an identification.

Her condition is not judged dangerous by hospital physicians. They think she will be able to leave the institution in a few hours.

Police at first were unable to find her name. Finally they learned she had registered as Mrs. Ethel Anderson at No. 177 Naples road, Brookline, where she had resided but a short while.

It was said at the house that she had spoken of her mother, Mrs. R. de Mandeville of Presque Isle, Me., and had made slight reference to her husband. Lodgers there had seen her in her room last night and several had noted that she had seemed morose lately.

The girl was employed as a manicurist in a Washington street barber shop.

During the morning rush hour she entered Drake's lunch room, No. 161 Brighton avenue, Allston, and asked for a cup of coffee. This she gulped hurriedly and then asked the counter man:

"Do you know who I am?"

With that she went into hysterics and would have collapsed but for a nearby customer.

SULLIVAN AND CURLEY IN RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Peter F. Sullivan, recently re elected for a fourth term as Mayo of Worcester, today announced h would be a candidate for Governo in 1924. He said he would run against Mayor James M. Curley o Boston or any other Democrat who might be nominated.

"I do not say 'If I go to Beacon Hill,' I say: 'I'm going there as Governor,' and with God's guidance and your help I'll administer the of fice in such a manner as will leave open a path for some other man who was born to privation and had to hew a road for himself."

With this assertion, Mayor James M. Curley concluded his guber natorial "pre-inaugural" in which he flayed as the "decaying harbin gers of caste government," the Good Government Association and the Finance Commission of Boston.

The address, made during pro longed cheering that seemed impos sible to halt, served to announce formally the Curley candidacy for Governor of Massachusetts in 1924. More than 500 enthusiastic members of the "12-13-21" Club assembled in the great dining room of the Elks home to hear it.

"I appreciate the difficulties that lie in the thorny road that lies be tween City Hall and Beacon Hill," he declared.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The Stand ard Oil Company of New Jersey construing the Supreme Court's dis solution decree, by which it was cut off from its former corporate hold ings as a "final expression of the public will on the subject of monopo listic control," has conducted its business under the conditions of "free and active competition," W. Film Firm Takes $1,000,000 Policy on Director

New York, Dec. 14.—There was a time when the motion picture companies restricted the taking out of huge insurance policies to their actors and actresses. But that day has passed. The Goldwyn Company has taken out two $1,000,000 policies for a director and a scenario writer.

It was learned today that a $1,000,000 policy has been closed for Eric Von Stroheim, the director, who two weeks ago was placed under contract by Goldwyn, and one for the same amount for Miss June Mathis, scenario chief, who three weeks ago joined the Goldwyn staff.

"OAK" PARLOR STOVE $6.75

BY AIR, WATER, TRAIN, CANADA DELUGES U. S. WITH POISON LIQUOR

3,000 IN ST. JOHN ALONE ARE RUNNING RUM

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan Service.

St. John, N. B., Dec. 14.—By automobile, train, aircraft, schooner, steamer, motorboat, Canadian liquor is deluging the United States. The guard against booze running is negligible. It is one of the simplest matters to smuggle booze from Canada to the United States, especially when the smuggling is done by the powerful groups now operating.

For the past three years booze running operations out of the Bay of Fundy have been working up to a huge scale. At the present time there are ten hydroplanes engaged in transporting booze out of the Bay of Fundy to the New England and New York and New Jersey seaboards.

There are 100 sailing craft engaged in running booze from Bay of Fundy ports to the United States.

There are 100 motor boats and 25 steamers engaged in the traffic. Some of the steamers are of the type used during the war as submarine patrols.

When the Province of Quebec adopted liquor control within the confines of that province, all of the private companies and individuals engaged in the wholesale liquor traffic were compelled to depart. The only haven of refuge left open was St. John. According to the laws of New Brunswick, these firms were allowed to locate in St. John as exporters only. That is, they were permitted to ship liquor out of the province but not to any point in New Brunswick. Twenty-five of these firms which had been located in Montreal removed to St. John and are now maintaining offices and warehouses there.

It is estimated that in the city of St. John alone there are 3,000 persons engaged in the booze-running traffic. Not a day passes but what at least a dozen craft leave the port of St. John or contiguous harbors loaded with poisonous whiskey. Some of these are loaded in broad daylight, while others are loaded under cover of darkness. Instances have been known of policemen aiding in the loading of these vessels.

Ostensibly all the booze-running craft are destined for the West Indies. The vessels controlled by the firms holding export licenses are cleared at the St. John customs house for Nassau, in the Bahamas; Hamilton, in the Bermudas; Kingston or Jamaica, or some such port in the islands in the Atlantic controlled by the British government. However, these cargoes can be found in the United States soon after shipment out of the Bay of Fundy.

There is a minimum risk for the bootlegger who lands his cargo on the Maine coast. The booze is thence shipped by automobile to New York City, Boston, and other cities.

Each of the hydroplanes have been equipped to carry not less than 1,000 bottles of whiskey. Two men are carried as a crew. Only one of these planes has been apprehended. This occurred when a pilot was in need of gasoline and descended at Jonesport, Me., a fishing settlement. The collector of customs happened along and espied 1,000 bottles of whiskey in canvas in the plane.

During the Winter the favorite avenue for shipping booze across the line is by water, but the shipments by land have not been wholly discontinued, despite the prevalence of cold and the deep snows of the north. Practically all of the automobile shipments are made at night. Some are by caravan and some by single car or truck. About five or six cars and trucks form a caravan and each carries a driver and guard. The guard is heavily armed and so is the driver. Automatic revolvers are the favored weapon.

The bootleggers use the speediest cars manufactured. The enforcement agents at the international line acting in behalf of Uncle Sam use broken down fliv-vers. There are few officers at the border who will intercept a booze carrying car for he takes his life in his hands by so doing.

Entire freight trains have transported whiskey into New England out of New Brunswick. Recently a train of fifteen cars left St. John, each car loaded with whiskey destined for Boston. The contents of each car were labelled as oats, fish, lumber, potatoes, apples, hay, cornmeal. This shipment was valued at $128,000, and reached Boston safely. There were two guards in each car to prevent broaching of the cargo by railroad employes.

BLIND MAKE AND SELL CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Blind workers are conducting an exhibition and sale on the second floor of Jays, No. 11 Temple place. It is interesting to watch them spinning and weaving so dexterously, without the aid of sight. The articles they make are useful and suitable for Christmas gifts. The event is conducted under auspices of the Department of Education, Division of the Blind.

THEFT OF WOOLENS FROM CARS CHARGED

James Grosso, No. 9 Prince street, North End, was arrested by railroad police after he broke into freight cars in Charlestown, it is alleged, and took $500 worth of woolen stuff.

After Grosso made away with the first lot he came back a second time and was caught, the police say. In Charlestown Court he pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000 bail until next Tuesday.

ARMY SALUTE OF 13 GUNS FOR BREWSTER

Major-General Andre W. Brewster, new commander of the First Corps Area, was saluted today with thirteen guns upon his first visit to the army base, South Boston.

He said he would take command about the middle of January, upon the completion of his work on the Elimination Board.

Officers and enlisted men greeted the general warmly as he held an informal reception in the office of the commanding general. He said:

"I feel greatly flattered and honored in being asked to come to this command. To be the successor of the brilliant Major-General Edwards is a distinction in itself.

"Then, as you all know, pure Americanism was first crystallized here and spread to other parts of the country. When anyone comes to Boston he feels that he is coming into the atmosphere of history. You have so many valuable traditions in history that all of us are proud when we get to Boston, and in these days Boston is not making enough of its history. I believe it is still the hub of the universe, and we feel that way in Washington."

The general being the only major-general in active service who has received the Congressional Medal of Honor told today to a few who questioned him about the event that won this honor that he rescued Corporal Miss Christianbury, who had fallen into a moat at Tien Tsien, China, during the Boxer insurrection.

He jumped in the water after the wounded corporal, was shot twice while carrying him and brought him to safety.

General Brewster was present today when General Pershing made his address before the Women's Republican Club, and will attend the Army and Navy Club ball in East Armory tomorrow.

While in Boston he will have for his aide Lieutenant J. W. Reed and Sergeant Clarence Lamb of Company G, Thirteenth Infantry.

Present Medal to Medford Pastor, 50 Years a Mason

The Henry Price Medal, emblematic of fifty years of distinguished service in Free Masonary, was today conferred on the Rev. Ransom A. Greene, D. D., of Medford.

The presentation was made at Dr. Greene's home, No. 623 Fellsway, Medford, by Arthur D. Prince, grand master of th Massachusetts Masons.

Dr. Greene has been a chaplain of Masonic lodges more than forty years. He recently retired as an active clergyman in the Universalist faith after fifty years of continuous service.

BROKER DIDN'T JILT GIRL, SAYS HIS MOTHER

George Albert Barker, Boston broker, reported to have left Miss Alice Gertrude Powers of Cambridge, his former telephone operator, waiting at the church altar, has been engaged to another girl for six years, according to Barker's mother, Mrs. Lucy Barker of Hunnewell terrace, Newton.

"My son could have had no intention of marrying Miss Powers," she said. "He has been engaged to a Newton girl for six years, and he never told me anything about this other girl.

"From what I have learned, there is a difference of fifteen years in their ages. On the day she says was the appointed wedding day, Albert went out, saying he would be gone a few hours. I haven't seen him since."

But Miss Powers is still keeping the marriage license—hoping against hope that her sweetheart was detained against his will, and that he may yet appear to make her wedding dreams come true.

Miss Powers insists that she still loves him, and she clings to the hope that she and he are the victims of "some terrible misunderstanding." They had planned to go to New York immediately after the ceremony and to sail from there for Bermuda.

CORLISS PALMER'S "VAMPING WAYS" REVEALED IN HER LETTERS

CONVICT SWEETHEART BARES HEART SECRETS

(Copyright, 1922, by Boston American.)
(Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.)

New York, Dec. 14.—Corliss Palmer had "vamping ways," Richard Middleton told the American in an exclusive interview, baring the heart secrets of his romance with the dashing Miss who is now Eugene V. Brewster's beauty queen. He added:

"Why, she vamped me for six years before I learned that she is absolutely incapable of any real love, except love for herself. I believed when our romance started—as I confidently believe now—that Corliss loved me to the best of her ability, but her ability wasn't enough to support a real love."

When Middleton was serving a term in prison on a charge of conspiracy to defraud, and after he had asked—he alleges—Corliss to "give him up," he wrote him many love letters.

In a letter dated May 8, 1920 she complained of him "acting funny" and added:

"I certainly didn't want to quit, because you know I always have loved you dearly and you know it.

"I sure am crazy to see you for you know you mean lots to me, dear. Please don't think I am just kidding, but you have always thought that, and in the end it has always been you that was 'dina. Wish I had a chance to ju...e just what kind of a friend I am to you.

"You ought to know that I am as true as I can be. I try to be, anyway."

"Lots of kisses," concluded this, as well as many other letters of the alleged 100 received by Middleton before, during and after his sentence was served.

In a June letter, written on the stationery of the Hotel Maryland, where Corliss was a cigar clerk, she refers to Middleton's "precious" letters and adds:

"You are the sweetest thing in the world to me."

"I wouldn't go as much as I did if I didn't get so awfully lonesome."

Another letter written not long before Corliss won Brewster's "fame and fortune" beauty contest, and before she became enshrined in the heart of the many-aided publicist and lawyer, seems to end the cycle of her girlish outlook on life—and her girlish affection for Middleton. In it, she said:

"Sure does make me feel good to get your sweet letters and to hear you talk as you do. I think your contentment has improved you a great deal. I always knew you were a good sweet boy and had lots of good ideas; now you are bringing them out. You have no idea how happy it makes me to see you that way.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

THERE are many ways in which little Jackie Coogan, the juvenile film star, differs from all other children of his age, but there is one particular respect in which he differs from all other children in the world. He is the only eight-year-old boy in the world who has a fortune in his own right and earned it all himself. It is estimated that since his debut before the motion picture camera Jackie Coogan has earned a quarter of a million dollars. This is but a start, as the lad's real career still lies before him, despite the fact that he has won world renown and has starred in several tremendous productions. His latest achievement was to portray the leading role in the picturization of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," now being shown at Tremont Temple.

Mr. Young and Mr. Melford are now at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, discussing the main features of the story. Leatrice Joy and Nita Naldi will be featured in the cast.

It so happens that Miss Davies spends most of her spare time reading history and historians are her favorite authors.

PREDICTS COAL, RAIL STRIKES

By International News Service.

New York, Dec. 14.—Transportation and coal strikes on as great if no greater scale than the two in the last year are foreseen by ex-Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas. Those strikes, he said, will occur within the next year or possibly in two years.

In an interview today he said the trend of reducing wages which will continue in proportion to the reduction in the cost of living, will be fought bitterly by "professional labor leaders" and consequently the two strikes, on a national scale, are bound to come. He declined to say in which field of the transportation industry one of the strikes would occur.

"The strikes," he said, "are bound to bring about an advance in the interest of the public to bring about legislation for its own protection."

He was hopeful of the economic conditions that the coming year would bring in stabilizing industry.

"The depth of depression has been touched in our industrial and economic life," he said. "The vision of those who see better times ahead is justifiable. I have not in the past few weeks leaders in industry and labor who agree that from now on the general tendency will be upward. Bottom has been touched and the turning point reached."

Wins Divorce

MRS. FRANCES M. HALE NEAS.

After a wait of four and a half years Mrs. Frances M. Hale Neas of Dorchester has been granted a divorce from her husband, Thomas F. Neas, an inspector in the Back Bay office of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. The divorce was granted at East Cambridge.

"I have been given the right to assume my maiden name," said Mrs. Neas, "and I am the happiest woman in the world. Now I am again Miss Frances M. Hale, and I am going to stick to that name, too."

Miss Hale, who works in a Boston bank, testified that her husband deserted her on June 11, 1918, after they had been married nine years.

"There have been many rumors during the past years," Miss Hale said, "that my husband obtained a divorce from me over a year ago. I want my friends to know that I got the divorce."

RATE DECISION IS DEFERRED UNTIL JUNE

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 14.—It will be June or July before Boston gets a decision on its demand from the two cents a hundred pounds freight differential in Philadelphia's favor, it was stated here at the hearings before Interstate Commerce Commission Examiner Charles F. Gerry.

The examiner set February 15 as the date for filing of briefs. Arguments will be heard in Washington and then the examiner will report his conclusions. The commission has three times upheld the differentials.

Instead of raising the Philadelphia and Baltimore rates, to equalize them with Boston's, transportation charges, particularly for grains, should be lowered all along the Atlantic seaboard, to maintain American export business, Walter Moore, a Boston rebuttal witness, declared. Mr. Moore is a member of the firm of Lunham & Moore, New York, ocean freight brokers.

He produced figures to show that ocean freight rates on grain from all North Atlantic points to Liverpool and London are substantially the same. Previous witnesses had contended that New York rates are lower than those applied from Philadelphia and Baltimore. Poor service from Boston was the reason advanced for that city's failure to be a factor in the export and import trade. Matthew Hale, formerly of Boston, now representative of the South Atlantic States' Association, and president of the South Atlantic Export Company, testified on his views as to a general public policy on freight rates.

Don't Wait a Minute!

HAVE you ever noticed the astonishing number of dust particles that you can sometimes see in a ray of sunshine? Now multiply those dust particles by a million and you have a faint idea of the countless billions of deadly, unseen germs that are lurking everywhere about you at all times. They are on your skin, on your clothes, on everything you touch. More than a billion of them can be contained in the space of a single drop of water that you drink.

Battle for Life Begins

Your skin is a protecting wall against these germs. In addition to this wall you have millions of defenders in your blood called white corpuscles. At the slightest break in the wall, a battle for your life begins at once. The invading germs rush to the attack; the white corpuscles rush to the defense. If the white corpuscles win the fight, the wound heals and you are safe. If the germs, which multiply with incredible rapidity, overcome the white corpuscles, you are apt to die from blood poisoning.

Germs Attack at Once

The instant the skin is broken by a cut or wound, no matter how small, this battle for your life begins. The germs don't wait a minute; they attack at once. Now is your time to help the white corpuscles that are being hurried by the blood stream to your defense. It will take several minutes for enough of them to arrive to repel the invaders. Those minutes are precious. Use them.

Secure a bottle of Zonite from the medicine shelf, pour a few drops on the wound. Bang!—every disease germ it touches is dead! If it were possible to observe this action through a powerful microscope, you would see them die instantly by thousands, as though smitten by lightning. Furthermore, the wound then heals in about one-half the usual time and with little or no pain and inflammation.

What About Other Antiseptics?

"Why won't other antiseptics do this for me?" you ask. This is why—and every bacteriologist in the world knows that it is true—all other forms of antiseptics are divided into two classes: highly poisonous compounds and so-called "mild antiseptics" that foam or taste pleasantly. If the poisonous, irritating compounds are used at sufficient strength to kill germs they also break down the wall that nature is trying to build. The popular "mild antiseptics" have little or no germicidal efficiency and so fail to accomplish the very purpose for which they are used. So, don't wait a minute. Whenever a break of the skin occurs in your family, use Zonite, the last word of science on the subject of antiseptics. It may save a life.

Facts About Zonite

Zonite is non-poisonous, perfectly safe to use and will rid the home of deadly poisons.

Zonite actually promotes tissue growth and is probably the most efficient healing agent known to materia medica.

When applied to a fresh cut or wound Zonite destroys the germs which cause blood poisoning, gangrene and other similar forms of infection.

Zonite heals cuts and wounds with astonishing rapidity and with but little or none of the usual pain and inflammation.

On account of its great germicidal power and non-poisonous character Zonite can be taken into the mouth at sufficient strength to destroy the germs which cause many respiratory diseases. It will be of incalculable value during epidemics of contagious childhood diseases.

MORE MONEY NEEDED TO ANSWER CHRISTMAS APPEAL OF HUNGRY

500 LETTERS ASKING AID RECIEVED EACH DAY

More cash is needed by the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund if the needy families that have already applied for food are to be fed on Christmas Day.

Never since the fund began its activities nine years ago have so many letters asking aid been received as this season. The Christmas Fund editor has been literally swamped with appeals for Christmas dinners.

The receipts of so many letters indicates clearly the extreme destitution that exists in Greater Boston at present. An average of 500 letters a day appealing for food have been received during the past week.

These letters were turned over to organize Christmas Fund workers who realized it became imperative to determine that only needy families shall be assisted. Persons in a position to buy their own Christmas dinners need not expect a basket of food from the American Fund.

COMMENDS WORK.

The careful manner in which the Christmas Fund editor seeks to place the food properly is one feature that commends the work to many contributors.

Unless contributions to the Fund come in much faster during the next few days thousands of persons in Greater Boston will go hungry on Christmas Day. The American wishes to feed as many needy persons as possible but must be limited by the amount of money obtained. A contract for three thousand more food has already been completed with the Old Ladies' Relief Society and more will be provided if sufficient money is contributed.

Requests for food should not be sent to the papers direct.

Members of the Boston American press room force made one of the largest contributions to the Christmas Fund. Others who have already sent in their contributions to the fund include:

A check for $25, sent from Hotel Walter C. Baxter, a widely known Boston lawyer. Another check for $50 came from T. J. Fitzpatrick of Scituate.

Dr. L. Parker and Dr. W. H. Prentice of No. 396 Dorchester street, in sending their contributions, "Enclosed please find check for dollars in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund."

James D. Casey, vice president of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company, in donating to the Fund wrote: "I am pleased to inclose a personal check from Mr. F. E. Yerxa, president of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company for $50 and a personal check for the same amount from the writer as contributions to your most excellent work."

Henry Hornblower of Congress street sent $25.

SUNDAY VAUDEVILLE.

A crowded house is expected at the big vaudeville show to be given in aid of the American's Fund at the St. James Theatre next Sunday evening under the joint auspices of George A. Cluss, managing director of the Boston Music Company, and F. A. Spears. Tickets for the performance are on sale at the Boston American office, No. 80 Summer street, Boston Sunday Advertiser, the Little Building and the Boston Theatre Agency, No. 53 Pawtucket street, conducted by J. J. Sugrue. Popular prices will prevail for this big show which will be continuous for five hours, beginning at 4 p. m.

Mr. Spears is arranging for one of the best vaudeville programs that has ever been shown at a Boston theatre. It is already assured for the appearance of the following artists: Foster & Stick comedy instrumental duo; Bessie Clayton, premier dancer; Dooley & Sayles, Irish comedians; Hirschbuhler Greene Lauriden & Rose, Lorman and Hall singing trio; Willy Horton in "Waiting"; Gertrude Ogden, and Dorothy McKay singing comedienne. The headline act will be the famous Mexicaringers whose sweet songs have been heard by large audiences throughout the country.

PICTURE TO LEAD.

In addition to the show which Mr. Spears is arranging, Charles R. Hecker's orchestra, which is one of the features of the St. James Stock Company, will play a prolonging program of classical and popular music. Mr. Hecker is one of the best known orchestra leaders in the theatre of Boston.

Through the kindness of Manager Rae Selwyn, a special performance of Lillian P. Brown and her Dance Revue will be given at the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons in behalf of the American's Fund.

The girls from the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser office expect a large gathering tonight at their dancing party in the Strand Ballroom at No. 177 Huntington avenue, Boston. They have arranged a number of pleasing features. Among those who will be featured in the entertainment are Jane Loots and Laurence Lester, two clever juvenile artists from Everett; the "Hooper Trio," Chester and Doris, Kelso H. Sutton, bass soprano soloist of St. Paul's Cathedral whose golden notes have been admired by thousands of people, and Joseph Fournier, eccentric dancer of unusual ability, who will contribute a "Frisco" dance. Bobby Sawyer's classy colored orchestra will play for general dancing.

Miss Edna May Dowd, who conducts a select school of dancing in Cambridge, is to aid the American's Fund next Saturday afternoon with a children's party in Grand Army Hall. The party will begin at 4:30 o'clock. There will be songs, dances and games.

PLANS RADIO CONCERT.

Miss Helen M. Roche, who will conduct the big radio concert tomorrow night expects that he will receive many more letters asking for food before the concert is broadcasted from the Hotel Shawmut and will be announced at the following municipal buildings: No. 11, Bunker Hill street, Charlestown; Columbia road, Dorchester, No. 339 Dudley street, Roxbury; No. 1179 Tremont street, Hyde Park, Town Hall, Lenox street, Lynn; Municipal Schoolhouse, South End, and Fire Marquette Council, No. 66 Norfolk street, South Boston. Members of the St. Alexander's Circle of South Boston will be in attendance at all the municipal buildings to receive people to their seats.

Through the generosity of P. M. Wyse, pen point of the Moore Company, hundreds of Moore self-filling pens have been contributed to sell for the Fund.

LUXURY A DEMONIACAL GIFT OF SOCIETY, ASSERTS GRON

WRECKED HIS HOME AND LIFE

Declares Wife Became Painted Manikin With Money; Greed in Eyes

By MARGERY LEE.

Portland, Me., Dec. 14.—Neils Gron defines luxury as a demoniacal gift from the devil to society.

The stern-faced Danish diplomat, whose unhappy domestic entanglements the Superior Divorce Court has been attempting to unsnarl, declares that not only luxury and moneyed idleness wrecked his home, but that it is devastating the world.

"Luxury, as we have learned [illegible] with our deals, and the [illegible] meet of them [illegible] vampire [illegible] eyes blazing. [illegible] from whom Mrs. [illegible] is seeking [illegible] his battered [illegible] to [illegible] America."

SENSATION SEEKERS.

"My wife is what most American women would be if they had the necessary fortunes," he said. "Her exotic revelries were typical of the society women of today. They are goddess seekers after sensation and pleasure. Their religions are frivolous poses which they assume for a brief time as they would becoming hats or gowns. They have bartered their womanhood for jewels and costly furs and intriguing silks."

Gron believes that his marital struggle has a symbolic significance for all society.

TRAGIC PAGEANT.

"Our life together was a tragic pageant in which we were but symbolic characters representing the forces that are [illegible] the world of humanity throughout the world," he continued.

"The soul of our [illegible] has been an angel figure in the [illegible] torn alternately [illegible] the side of idealism and worth, and [illegible] to the side of extravagance and [illegible] sin.

"Struggle [illegible] pageant. A struggle [illegible] the figure of my wife [illegible] times when [illegible] throw off the [illegible] that held it [illegible] things in their proper light for a time, and she was a wonder-woman. But money and idleness and the drugging allurements of society gradually wove an evil spell over her again, so that she became a beautiful painted manikin with a smile of faded pleasure on her perfumed lips, and the cunning of money-greed in her eyes.

"My wife once said I rejected because she was wearing a fur coat that was thin. If I rejected it was because it always hurt me to see her so interested in her clothes. She thought of little else."

Amber Exhibition at Mrs. Gardner's Palace of Rare Beauty, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

If either Mrs. Henry Lyman or Mrs. Arthur Blake ever wear their enormous amber chains now on exhibition at Mrs. Jack Gardner's palace, I'm sure they must be nearly buried under the weight of them. Such chains I never did see!

It's really worth the trip to Mrs. Gardner's palace to see this amber collection being shown in aid of the Emergency Fund for Russian Refugees, if only to find out that amber isn't confined merely to golden brown colors, but that there's such a thing as black, white, garnet, bluish, and even green amber. The exhibition, which is in the Spanish cloister of the famous palace in the Fenway, opened on Wednesday, and is open today and tomorrow from noon until four o'clock.

Mrs. Boylston Beal (Elizabeth Grew), whose husband is attached to the American embassy in London, has lent, among other amber pieces, a beautiful little Buddha of palest golden color. In the same case lies a Mandarin ring and carved beads, loaned by her daughter, Miss Betty Beal. Mrs. Beal, after an absence of several seasons abroad, has once more opened the town house at No. 108 Beacon street, and her daughter is with her.

Mrs. Frederick G. Hall has added to the collection her truly wonderful old Chinese ornaments. These are large pieces of amber, marvellously carved, two of them of a rich pink color, and two of a pale greenish golden.

There was a long chain of black amber, which extremely rare shown by the Misses Appleton and Ellis. Right next to this chain reposed a white one, a kind of Baltic amber known as bone amber. Mrs. George P. Denny had loaned several strings of Russian amber, which were of a rich wine color. In the same case was an exquisite little elephant of a warm golden color, loaned by Mrs. Henry G. Vaughan, whose husband is Master of the Hounds at the Norfolk Hunt Club.

There was quite a quaint, "antiquish" look about the amber pieces set in gold loaned by Mrs. Roger S. Warner of Chestnut street, which contrasted strongly with the almost barbaric looking junks of amber strung into a chain by striped pieces of black and white. There were two such fascinating chains, loaned by Dr. John Phillips of Mt. Vernon street. There were also some Burmese bead ornaments, as well as some native Soudanese pieces. Perhaps one of the most interesting bits of the exhibition was a large chain of blackish amber, which had been found at the bottom of a lake in South America.

But there were many other pieces, each of them well worth seeing.

MRS. OLIVER WOLCOTT

Seen here in old-fashioned costume is Mrs. Oliver Wolcott (Sybil Appleton) who has loaned several pieces to the rare amber collection on exhibition today and tomorrow at Mrs. Jack Gardner's palace from noon until 4 o'clock.

Among the exhibitors of the amber exhibition is Mrs. Oliver Wolcott, who, prior to her very simple wedding about a fortnight ago was Miss Sybil Appleton. She is the daughter of Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton who lent many of her amber pieces to the collection, among them several pendants of blue Sicilian amber, which have a soft, bluish glow to them.

Apropos of the onetime Sybil Appleton, one hears that she was of the lucky group to whom Mrs. Black gave her pearls when she divided her gorgeous string some time ago.

Young Wolcott is taking his bride on a wedding journey abroad, and Mrs. Appleton, too, I hear, is to spend the Winter abroad.

Of those who came for a glimpse of the stones on exhibition was Miss Annie Endicott Nourse. Others whom I noted were Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Parker, Mrs. Jasper Whiting, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mrs. Henry Lyman, Mrs. J. Cameron Bradley, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Little, Miss Ellen Ballard and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Sr. Mrs. John L. Coolidge was taking tickets at the door.

A number of society matrons are to serve as saleswomen at the Christmas sale which takes place today from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at the Parish house of Trinity Church.

LLOYD GEORGE ARTICLES STIR BRITAIN

BY JOHN T. BURKE,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Special Cable to Universal Service

London, Dec. 14.—Former Premier Lloyd George, in his article next Sunday in the Hearst papers, will add by irrefutable proofs Premier Poincare's denial that France's military party want to seize and hold the left bank of the Rhine.

Universal Service is authorized to make this announcement.

Lloyd George's charges, coming at a time when Britain is stunned by the announcement of Poincare's bellicose demand for the right to invade the Ruhr districts and for the rule of Essen and Bochum which led to the break-up of the premiers' conference are arousing tremendous interest here.

FACE GRAVE CRISIS.

While publicists are chary of discussing the matter with Europe facing another grave crisis, leading newspapers, like the Daily Telegraph and the Daily Mail, print long special articles and editorials giving credit to the Hearst papers for the publication in America of the epoch making articles.

The Daily Telegraph says:

"The Hearst press, which has secured the rights to Lloyd George's articles describes in the first of the series an answer to Clemenceau which all good Americans should ponder.

"Brisbane, Hearst's chief editor writes 'with the European league breaking up, why should Americans tie their country up with any foreign faction' after a reminder that British statesmen handle American statesmen as children handle kittens.

"The Hearst press admits that the French nation does not want more war and does not want to seize German territory; wants only peace and security. But France, like some other republics, is governed not by her people but by the great financial interests.

"Premier Poincare for years was the representative of the great financial interests of France including the makers of ammunition, who armed billions in the last war and would earn more billions in the next. France does not want more war, but declares Hearst's editorial in black type, 'individuals do want it.'"

HESITATE TO COMMENT.

The Daily Mail announces:

"The Hearst newspapers, who have bought American rights in the Lloyd George contributions on European affairs, make the first appearance today of a fervid appeal to the American government to withdraw immediately their troops from the Rhine and keep the country absolutely free from all entanglements in European affairs."

Members of Parliament showed hesitancy in commenting on the Lloyd George-Poincare controversy. Colonel Josiah Wedgewood, one of the best informed of the Labor members, declared:

"I should have supposed that it was obvious that the French actions during the last three years could only be explained as Lloyd George has done it."

Commander Kenworthy, an Independent Liberal, said:

"I think Lloyd George is right up to a certain point. But he should have said all this earlier. He followed the tail of the mob and now we have a conservative government in power.

"If the French are going on with their policy of economic ruin for Europe they must be given to understand that the English do not stand for it. I hope the event will be the end of the entente and result in the isolation of France, as a consequence of which we should have the moral support of America."

Tardieu Declares L. George Cannot Prove Charges

Paris, Dec. 14.—"Lloyd George's untruths are skilfully presented by this practised demagogue with the aim to give an air of rough honesty calculates to fool the man in the street who is not versed in international politics," exclaimed Andre Tardieu, one of the French peace negotiators at Versailles.

"Neither M. Clemenceau nor myself need concern ourselves with his statements because they are denied by peace conference documents and by the proces-verbal themselves.

"Suffice it to declare again that France never at any period of the negotiations proposed or wanted to annex the left bank of the Rhine. It will be noted that Lloyd George does not bring a single official document to support his accusations. This is because he cannot."

PRINCE OF WALES INVITED TO ULSTER

Belfast, Dec. 14.—An invitation to visit Ulster in the Spring was sent to the Prince of Wales today by the Ulster government. It is believed that he will accept and that he will visit Dublin at the same time.

POPE BESTOWS RED HATS ON 6 CARDINALS

Rome, Dec. 14 (By the Associated Press).—Public investiture by Pope Pius of six of the eight new Cardinals took place in St. Peter's today, which at the first public consistory of Pius' pontificate the recently created Princes of the Church received from the Pontiff the red hat and the rochet, insignia of their elevation.

Cardinal Locatelli and Cardinal Casanova were absent. They will be invested by the heads of their respective States, Portugal and Spain.

As the Pope took his seat beneath a canopy of violet silk and cold brocade opened the Consistory, kissing his hand. They then knelt on the lowest step of the throne and kissed the Pontiff's foot, hand and cheek, retiring to a bench at the left of the dais.

Then as they resumed their kneeling position the octave of the ceremonies drawing to the close, Cardinal Vicera made a magnificent war cry of the spiritual, and the Pontiff holding the red hat over their heads recited the words of presentation to their

HARDING URGES FARM MARKET CO-OPERATION

Washington, Dec. 14.—American farmers, who are now experiencing the rigors of agricultural depression, were advised by President Harding today to promote co-operative marketing to the fullest extent, as a measure of helping themselves.

The President offered this advice in a letter read here today before the Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations by Senator Ernst Republican of Kentucky.

"Here is a single movement that promises more help toward the present relief and the permanent betterment of agricultural conditions than this one," President Harding wrote.

"In the long run, government aid cannot be made effective unless the farmers shall be organized and alive to their own responsibility to establish and use practical instruments for the distribution of credits and the encouragement of the most economical marketing methods. This association stands supremely for the best, most effective effort to establish better methods and to teach the farmer and his friends to utilize them."

Declares 90 Per Cent. of N. W. Farmers "Bankrupt"

Washington, Dec. 14 (By International News Service)—Ninety per cent of the farmers of the Northwest are bankrupt, W. J. Robinson, chairman of the Northwestern Grain Growers' Association told the Senate Agriculture Committee today.

Robinson declared the government would have to extend direct financial aid within a year or the farmers would be driven off their farms by poverty.

RESCUES SEAMAN CAUGHT IN HOIST

New Bedford, Dec. 14—The presence of mind and quickness of Captain Fred Butler of the fishing schooner Peerless, off Black Rock (Buzzards Bay), saved Antone Mann, a fisherman of Fairhaven, from serious injury or death. Mann was brought here suffering from a fractured right arm. The injured man was working at the engine of a hoist when a loose end of his sleeve became entangled in the drum. He was slowly being pulled into the end of the hoist when Captain Butler cut him loose.

ANGRY CREW DUMPS LIQUOR IN OCEAN

New York, Dec. 14.—A part of a liquor cargo valued at $1,700,000, at bootleg prices, has been dumped into the ocean off Freeport, L. I., according to a report received by Frank J. Hale and James R. Kerrigan, chief intelligence officers for the prohibition enforcement department.

The whiskey, brought here from the Bahamas, was thrown overboard Tuesday when members of the rum runner's crew were angered at failure of the cargo's owners in New York either to get water and food supplies to the ship or to unload the liquor.

The vessel lay in the liquor camping grounds for several days, while small boats, operated by owners of the cargo, made futile efforts to run the government blockade and obtain the liquor.

After dumping the liquor the ship started on the return trip to the Bahamas.

State Declares War on Christmas Tree Gatherers

The forces of the State police and forest wardens combined today in forming a vigilance committee to arrest all persons who cut down Christmas trees, shrubbery and other natural decorations for the holiday season.

Scores of complaints have reached the officials that people in autos ride out into the country, help themselves to somebody else's property and drive back for a merry Christmas with their children.

If they are caught, a fine of $500 or imprisonment for six months can take the "merry" out of this coming Christmas.

SCHEURER IS NEW SWISS PRESIDENT

Berne, Dec. 14 (By Associated Press)—Karl Scheurer, vice-president of the Swiss Confederation during the last year, was elected president for 1923 today. He received 154 votes out of the 210 in the Federal Assembly. Ernest Chauard of Lausanne, a Federal councilor, was elected vice-president.

ECONOMIC CODE URGED TO END LABOR WARS

White Sulphur Springs, West Va., Dec. 14.—Continued orderly development of the nation, industrially and governmentally, demands the formation of an industrial code aimed at the peaceful settlement of disputes between capital and labor, Governor James Hartness of Vermont said in an address at the conference of governors here today.

Governor Hartness, former president of the American Society of Engineers, is a large employer of labor operating a machine tool plant at Springfield, Vt.

He said conditions seemed to warrant "some central equalizing board that will function in the interest of labor, capital and the public." He asserted that government regulation had not been satisfactory, because it had run contrary to natural law and had been of a restrictive nature, and that unfair practices still existed which, if not eliminated as much as possible by orderly methods, would result in further political and social unrest.

"The problem of what is just and fair pay is to be solved by arbitration based on a code that fits economic laws. It is necessary to devise for an economically sound compensation for labor and capital which stimulates rather than reduces the spirit of enterprise. We must see that not only the worker but the capitalist as well uses his energy in a way beneficial to the public interest."

Waldorf Lunch

What This Waldorf Seal Means to You

This is one reason you find unusual courtesy where you see this seal on a lunch room window—

In Florida last winter, I stayed at two hotels run by the same corporation. Yet they were very different.

In one, the staff was attentive—anxious to please. In the other just the opposite attitude was exhibited. You can imagine which was the pleasant place to stop.

On returning we started a courtesy campaign among the Waldorf staff. They liked it. It did wonders—perhaps you've noticed the difference.

Where you see the Waldorf Seal on a lunch room window, you can be sure of courtesy and consideration. It means an eating place based on these three fundamentals—Quality, Cleanliness and Service.

"Good Morning"

You have a right to expect that cheery greeting in a Waldorf—a "Thank You" from the Cashier and, if you are undecided as to just what to eat, a courteous suggestion from the Counterman.

It is a Waldorf rule that all employees unite to give you as polite and courteous attention as can possibly be given in a quick service lunch room.

This courtesy does not come from a hope for tips—they are not permitted in the Waldorf—but from the pleasure of seeing you pleased with both the service and the food.

48 STATES TO FIGHT KU KLUX KLAN

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 14.—A move for united action by the 48 States to destroy the "invisible empire" of the Ku Klux Klan will be launched at the annual governors' conference, which opened its session here today.

Registration of the names of secret societies in the jurisdiction of Justice [illegible] proposed by Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana, who will present a program [illegible]

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Coronado coal case may provide the way for prosecution of the Klan as a corporation and hold its officers responsible for lawless acts committed by its members, according to the Governors.

The decision declared labor unions responsible for violence and damages committed by their members and the same principles, it is declared, may apply to the Klan or any other incorporated secret organization.

State laws requiring the publication of names of members of secret societies also will be advocated by Governor Parker.

The Klan will be the chief topic of discussion by the State executives, three of its bitterest opponents—Governor Parker, Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas and Governor Ben Wolcott of Oregon—are on the program for addresses dealing with the Klan and will lead the demand for nation-wide war against the organization.

Warning that a "religious civil war" is at hand unless immediate and drastic steps are taken to check the spread of the Klan and smash its power, Governor Walcott [illegible] invasion of his state today he will "demand secrecy the conference" and recommendation of a program to Silver [illegible] for a uniform [illegible] enforcement by Federal [illegible] with the Klan.

War Begun on Bay State Klan

"The Invisible Empire" has established headquarters in Boston. In an office building, under a name that is purposely misleading, the Ku Klux Klan has secured a location from which its activities in the Hub will, in the future, be controlled.

For some time past "Box 851" at the Central postoffice has served as the mail address of the local Klan.

From its headquarters plans are being laid to send a delegation of Klansmen to the big demonstration that is to be held in Springfield within the coming month.

The Klan, however, faces a fight with the newly-organized Law and Order League, which has been duly incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth for that specific purpose.

Daniel W. Harrington of Roxbury, president of the organization, is leading the campaign for a heavy membership.

"We are going to fight in the open," declared President Harrington. "We are equipping every member with a badge so that the Klansmen themselves can know who we are. But we do not intend to fight violence with violence. It is our purpose to show the American people that lawlessness must not flourish.

"Recently a Harvard student was literally forced out of college by the college Klan. Newspapers later said that other causes sent him from Cambridge, but I have information that the college Klan was directly responsible, that this young man was persecuted mercilessly and had to quit.

LEGION AGAINST LINKING BONUS AND 'WET' BILLS

By International News Service.

Washington, Dec. 14—The American Legion has definitely decided to force down all plans for passing a beer and light wines act to the soldiers' bonus bill, the International News Service learned today.

Legion officials, including National Commander Alvin T. Owsley reached this decision at a conference here. They feared that raising the prohibition issue would jeopardize passage of the bonus by the present Congress.

A majority of Legion officials also are opposed to inclusion in the new bill of any provisions for payment of the bonus, it was said. This ban would exempt not only to sales and luxury taxes but even to the proposed bond issue suggested by Chairman Fordney of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Representatives of the soldiers' organizations are determined to force action during the present session. This drive was heartily endorsed by soldier members of the House.

MAYOR WOULD ABOLISH CITY LICENSE BOARD

Mayor Curley today directed Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan to draft a bill for the Legislature providing for the abolition of the present licensing board, and the transfer of its duties to the Police Department, where they originally existed, or to the licensing division of the city service.

In his letter to Mr. Sullivan, the Mayor says he can see no valid reason for the continued existence of the board and adds that for the protection of the city treasury from further contemplated raids," it should be eliminated.

The action of the mayor followed a report filed by Robert Commissioner Charles Fox showing the board had collected fees for the sum of $44,081.84. To collect this amount the city spent $35,204.36, thus leaving a balance of but $8,877.48.

Commissioner Fox asserts the board plans to raise the minimum salary of its employees to $1,800. He says that now is an excellent time to raise the city at least $50,000 by abolishing the board.

LINOW WILL TREAT CALZA ROUGHLY IN BOUT TONIGHT

ITALIAN CHAMPION FACES BIG TEST

By JACK CONWAY

"Treat 'em rough"

That's how Ivan Linow has succeeded in the ring and on the mat.

It's Ivan Linow in the mat game and Jack Leon within the ropes arena.

As a fighter Leon fought Jess Willard, Arthur Pelkey and other prominent men. He is a terrific puncher.

The Russian Lion is back to the mat game which was his first love. He shows against George Calza, Italian heavyweight champion, at the Grand Opera House tonight at a show which will be staged under the direction of the Old Howard management.

"I'll treat him rough."

That is the way Linow plans to battle the youthful Italian sensation.

His part required that he parade around with a regular beard. Ivan plans to go back to the movies again and so has not had his beard shaved off. Therefore Calza will receive an opportunity to score with a beard hold this p. m.

It will be a real test for Calza. Which should please.

The Italian will have to battle every second he is on the mat or go down to defeat. Linow is the toughest bird Calza has ever engaged.

* * *

A special ring has been installed on account of Linow's rough tactics. Maybe Linow will win by a left hook to the jaw.

* * *

We asked Linow what he thought of the proposed bout between Dempsey and Lewis.

"The wrestler would win," said Ivan. "Dempsey would have to win in a genix. Lewis could cover up, rush to close quarters, grip dark's legs and toss him.

"I saw the mixed bout between Billy Papke and Farmer Burns at Los Angeles. Burns got to close quarters and had Papke tied in knots inside of half a minute.

"A mixed match would be a ridiculous affair and would be an imposition upon the public. They wouldn't get anything for their money."

* * *

Calza and Linow will be supported by a strong card. Louis Andrews, Greek lightweight, will oppose Steve Romanoff, while Tommy Record will have George Palmer as an opponent.

* * *

GENARO SURE WHIRLWIND SCRAPPER

"One of the real whirlwinds of the ring."

And as Kelley is considered one of the most capable handlers of boxers in the country, his opinion is well worth repeating.

Genaro arrived in Boston with his manager, Phil Bernstein, Tuesday evening, and although it was date Harry Kelley kept the candles burning while the "human dynamo" worked out before an enthusiastic gallery of fans. When the fans heard that Genaro was coming to forgot all thoughts of their evening meal so anxious were they to see the little Fash work out.

Both Matters Are Ready

Terry Martin, whom Genaro meets tomorrow night at Mechanics Building, arrived in Boston last night with his manager, Johnny Keyes, and he will complete his training today.

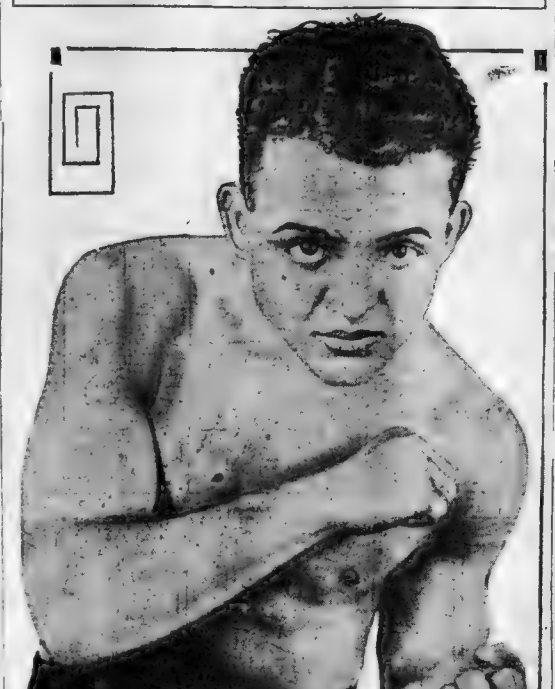
Genaro spent more than an hour yesterday at the State House with Commissioner Buckley. The boxing commissioner was eager to learn about Genaro's two victories over Champion Pancho Villa. The little New Yorker, however, is not a boastful boxer, and his manager was forced to do most of the talking.

Before leaving the State House Genaro was armed with his license to box here tomorrow night. Tex will down all reports that the little New Yorker would not be allowed to box here. Martin will get his license today.

Providence Fans Out in Force

Providence is coming out strong for Martin. The demand has been large, for they want to see their idol defeat Genaro. Martin is matched to meet Pancho Villa in New York December 29.

The preliminaries on the card include Paddy Owens of Cambridge and Tommy Nee of South Boston, Tommy French of Brookline and Al Sears of East Boston, and Ted Coolidge of Manchester and Neddo Flanagan of Malden.



FRANKIE GENARO

GARDINI HEADS BIG ARRAY OF STAR MATMEN

Renato Gardini, the Italian heavyweight wrestler, is due in Boston the early part of next week, coming direct from the Pacific coast where he has had a remarkable wrestling season. He wires Promoter Tuohey that he is in perfect shape for the Christmas night carnival in Mechanics Building and does not care whom he is paired with.

Renato Gardini.

Tuohey, however, feels that a match between Gardini and Castano, the winner of the Mexican tournament, would prove the most sensational he could arrange, as both men have the Latin temperament.

With Gardini, Wadek Zbyesko, Frank Judson, Castano, John Prindle, the Indiana star, and Angelo Taramachi, already signed, the question for Tuohey in the pairings to give the fans the biggest run for their money.

AMATEUR BOXING AT CAMBRIDGE

The next amateur open boxing meeting under the auspices of the East Cambridge Institute A. A. will be held at Institute Hall, Cambridge street, East Cambridge Thursday evening, December 28.

Five classes will be contested and it is expected that this show will surpass those of the past. "Pure" pugilists in the 112, 126, 135, 147 and 160 pound class will swap gloves and there should by plenty of excitement during the evening.

The affair will be in charge of Bernard J. Fox and any boxer desirous of entering the contest should write to Mr. Fox at the Institute Hall, Cambridge.

JACK TAYLOR REAL NORFOLK RIVAL

There are breakers ahead for Kid Norfolk, colored lightweight champion.

Kid Norfolk.

Jack Taylor, more sensational than even Lee Anderson was come East under the management of the veteran Tom O'Rourke, and is out to win Norfolk's title.

These warriors are not strangers. They have already battled twice in Nebraska rings. The first tussle was declared a draw by the referee after ten torrid rounds of milling. In the second encounter Taylor won the decision.

Taylor has beaten Tiger Flower, Battling Johnson and Ed Wright also. He has engaged in some twenty bouts and has won virtually all of them by knockouts in two or three rounds.

O'Rourke saw Taylor box and induced him to sign a contract. Tom says Taylor is the greatest colored fighter he has seen in action since the palmy days of Joe Walcott.

HARMON BEATS HERMAN IN STAR BOUT

Willie Harmon of Boston easily defeated Johnny Herman of Lynn, in the sixth round of their scheduled ten round bout at the Armory A. A. last night.

Harmon had the best of every round, but Herman was game to the core and did not quit until Referee Goodman stopped the battle in the sixth. Harmon was too heavy for the Lynn lad, and although he took everything that was coming to him Herman was unable to stand up under the terrific body blows he received.

This is Harmon's twenty-sixth straight win.

In the preliminaries Young Carney of New Bedford defeated Georgie Segal of Revere in the second round of their scheduled eight-round bout and Al Lewis of the South End disposed of Young Burke of Boston in the second round of their argument.

COSTONO TOO GOOD FOR SMALL FOE

George V. Tuohey, an able judge of wrestling, considers Joe Perelli's challenge of Costono, Spanish wrestler, rather ridiculous. Perelli is pounds lighter than the Spaniard and so, according to Tuohey, would not have a chance of winning.

Weight does not enter as much into the argument when it is a case of a good little man against a poor big man. But in the Perelli-Costono affair it would be a good little man against a good big man. And, very probably, the good big man would win. The Spaniard will receive some real opposition when he opposes Renato Gardini at Tuohey's big Christmas night show.

CRIMSON PICKS GRID LEADER TOMORROW

Twenty-seven members of the Harvard varsity football team will meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow to elect a captain for next year. The voting will take place at a Cambridge photographer's studio where the annual team picture is taken.

Charles Hubbard of Milton, who played a star game at guard throughout the past season, is the outstanding candidate for the leadership of next year's Crimson gridiron aggregation.

But there are strange things done in the midnight sun. And there are strange things done at Harvard. So no one can forecast accurately as to the result of the election. Last year it's betting was 10 to 8 on Owen and Buell won. In 1919, it was 10 to 1 on Eddie Casey. He was beaten out by Billy Murray, one of his best friends.

Other figures who loom up on the horizon are Charles Eastman of Nebraska, Percy Jenkins of Quincy, Erwin Gehrke of Cleveland and Don Holder of New Orleans.

LISTMAN TO LEAD QUINCY HIGH TEAM

Herbert Listman was elected captain of Quincy High School football team for next year at a meeting of the letter men. He played at fullback during the past season and was rated as one of the best backs in the Boston District.

Listman came from Brockton to Quincy where he made quite a reputation in all kinds of athletics, including baseball, basketball, track and swimming. He is also a member of the Quincy High basketball team.

Tigers Are Soccer Champions Once More

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 14—The Princeton Soccer Team retained the Intercollegiate League title by defeating the University of Penn, 3 to 1, in the play-off game for the championship on University Field here this afternoon.

For the second consecutive year, the Tigers nosed out the Quakers after a hard-fought battle. The league leadership was tied up last Saturday when Princeton defeated Penn, 2 to 1, in Philadelphia.

J. W. Cooper and Woodbridge, aided by excellent team work, made the first two goals for Princeton, while Thomas made the third unassisted. The outstanding feature of the Penn team play was the work of Captain Anelis, while Cooper and Smart stood out for Princeton.

Kulinary Kontest Full of Pepper Between Kolleges for Kooks

By Dave Sentner

BOSTON hotel chefs are bemoaning the fact that so few American boys are going in for the culinary art. Why not establish a Kitchenette Kollege? Graduates would get the degree of K. K. K., standing for King Kook of the Kitchen.

Field athletics would consist of cooking contests, with first prize to be a brand new apron; second prize, a dishrag; third prize, a box of matches.

Imagine the stadium containing a holiday throng of 70,000 persons watching breathlessly the annual gridiron match between Kale and Karvard, with eleven stalwart athletes each carrying a sawn black stove facing the same number of cooking athletes and stoves on the opposing team.

The whistle would blow and things would start to sizzle. The quarterback cook would call the signal, and as one man the entire team would toss their eggs into their pans. A well-drilled team would swallow the shells without a cackle.

The referee would give both teams three minutes and then taste the result for a decision. Of course the foil in referees might be considerable, but there is an element of danger in every "man a game."

The sight of twenty-two youths trained to the quick scrambling eggs against the wind would be a most stirring scene.

Then there would be the custard pie formation. Consider the spectacle of a gridiron star forward passing a custard pie into the face of the enemy.

Sporting writers would speak of the coach's tackling of a tough steak, how a half back cook remained in the game in spite of a nasty gash, etc. Of the amount of pepper exhibited by the winning team.

Medbury Says Missing a Car Is Sometimes a Luxury

By John P. Medbury

THE traction companies in most of the large cities are overcoming the congestion by not stopping for passengers who are waiting on the street corners.

THIS does away with full cars.

THEIR motto is to run them empty and even the motorman usually has a vacant look on his face.

OF course he and the conductor stop long enough to eat their lunch. They don't care about the car being empty but they're going to fill their mouths every chance they get.

STILL, the cars don't always run absolutely empty. Once in a while the motorman gets lonesome and then he stops and lets somebody on so he'll have company.

YOU never really know on what side of the street the car is going to stop, but you can be pretty sure that if you're standing on one side it's going to stop on the other.

BUT in most cases you can be absolutely certain that it isn't going to stop at all.

NINE times out of ten you've got to "ring them bells" before they get any idea that you want to get on.

ONE guy got run over and instead of suing the company he had to pay them seventy-five cents for pressing his clothes.

MOST of the time you have to chase the car seven or eight blocks. Then just as you hop aboard you only have time to pay your fare before you come to your street and have to get off again.

A GUY last week was so interested in chasing a car that he ran five blocks past the corner where he lived.

THEN he chased another one going in the opposite direction and ran three blocks past the place where he intended to get on the first one.

AFTER he did this a few times he gave up the chase because he forgot where he was going.

MOST people don't know what a luxury it is to miss a street car until they get on one of them.

ONE passenger wrote to the company and told them that as far as he was concerned they could quit running the cars and he'd never miss them.

DURING the war they used to stop at one block and wait for one to come along. It was all of them.

THE only sure way of catching one is to go down to the car barns and start out with them.

WHAT THE SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF RESOLUTIONS MEANS

Do you consider the breaking of a good resolution as something of little importance?

Is it easy for you, after you have decided to do or not to do a certain thing to act contrary to your personal decision?

[illegible] of the ignoble [illegible] Princess of his [illegible] upon, [illegible] the plot of force [illegible] lowered [illegible] Charle [illegible] which [illegible] has its attractions for to-day. She told of her imprisonment in the palace of the Tournelles and of her deadly peril and many indignities, and the tale lost nothing in the telling. Then she finished by throwing her arms around Henry's neck in a passionate flood of tears and begging him to protect her—to save her! save her! save her! his little sister.

It was all such perfect acting that for the time I forgot it was acting, and a great lump swelled up in my throat. It was, however, only for the instant, and when Mary whose face was hidden from all the others, on Henry's breast, smiled slyly at me from the midst of her tears and sobs, I burst into a laugh that was like to have spoiled everything. Henry turned quickly upon me, and I tried to cover it by pretending that I was sobbing. Wolsey helped me out by putting a corner of his gown to his eyes when Henry, seeing us all so affected began to catch the fever and swell with indignation. He put Mary away from him, and striding up and down the room exclaimed in a voice that all could hear. "The dog! the dog! to treat my sister so. My sister! My father's daughter! My sister! The first princess of England and Queen of France for his mistress! By every god that ever breathed, I'll chastise this scurvy cur until he howls again. I swear it by my crown. If it costs me my kingdom," and so on until words failed him. But see how he kept his oath, and see how he and France hob-nobbed not long afterward at the Field of the Cloth of Gold.

Henry came back to Mary and began to question her, when she repeated the story for him. Then it was she told of my timely arrival, and how, in order to escape and protect herself from Francis, she had been compelled to marry Brandon and flee with us.

She said: "I so wanted to come home to England and be married where my dear brother could give me away, but I was in such mortal dread of Francis and there was no other means of escape, so—"

Charles Brandon at the tourney as the handsome stranger from the provinces.

"God's death! If I had but one other sister like you, I swear before heaven I'd have myself hanged. Married to Brandon? Fool! Idiot! what do you mean? Married to Brandon! Jesu! You'll drive me mad. Just one other like you in England, and the whole damned kingdom might sink; I'd have none of it. Married to Brandon without my consent!"

"No! no! brother," answered Mary softly, leaning affectionately against his bulky form, "do you suppose I would do that? Now don't be unkind to me when I have been away from you so long! You gave me your consent four months ago. Do you not remember? You know I would never have done it otherwise."

"Yes, I know! You would not do anything—you did not want; and it seems equally certain that in the end you always manage to do everything you do want. Hell and furies!"

Why, brother, I will leave it to my Lord Bishop of York if you did not promise me that day, in this very room, and almost on the very spot, that if I would marry Louis of France I might marry whomsoever I wished when I should die. Of course, you knew after what I had said whom I should choose, so I went to a little church in company with Queen Claude, and took my hair down and married him, and I am his wife, and no power on earth can make it otherwise," and she looked up into his face with a defiant little pout, as much as to say, "Now, what are you going to do about it?"

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

"WHEN I was driven from the Tampico country—forced to leave my uncle's little inn," said Mabel, in a voice so low I had to lean close to catch her words, "I didn't know where to go. I've told you that. But I've never given you a full account of my wanderings before I came to Oliver's mother and he haven of refuge she offered me. I did tell you the truth when I said I came North. But I didn't [illegible] I [illegible] I went to Durango [illegible] that mean anything to you?" he [illegible] I asked. I broke in gravely.

"I'M NOT DURANGO. DOES THAT MEAN ANYTHING TO YOU?

Complete Acceptance

"I went to Durango, because I knew that since Dick had stolen the papers giving title to the biggest oil fields near Tampico, he'd hurry to Mexico City and file them. But I didn't know if he'd do that at once, or go home—and home for him for years had been Durango and the country near there. And in spite of the fact that I knew he was a thief and a coward, who'd gone off leaving me to bear the blame for his plot to get at the safe to which I had the combination. I—Oh Anne, I'm ashamed to say it!"

"I know, dear," I said in a commonplace voice of complete acceptance. "You still loved him. He was your man—what he did couldn't matter."

Mabel's smile was one of the saddest I have ever seen on any face. But with a note of relief in her voice she plunged ahead with a sudden power as if my understanding had made her once more clear to herself.

"I went to Durango and waited. I knew he'd come. I crept about at night because I was afraid to have people see me. And then one night, Ramon Cordova came cantering into town on his little roan horse. And with him was young Manuel Ortiz, who come

"He'd been at our inn, and he'd always had a pleasant enough word for me—not for me exactly, but for anyone who served him. He had a way of looking through you as if he was looking for something he hadn't found."

Unheeding Mabel raced ahead as if she saw it all again and wanted to make me see it too, before the colors faded.

"I drew back into the corner of a wall behind the little church of San Luis. I hid there and crept out to follow the roan horse and the white pony dappled with red. I knew they were going to meet someone. I thought it might be Dick. They rode to the station. I followed.

Only a Lad

"Manuelo Ortiz was only a lad then, but he was handsome and clean and sweet. I was sorry for him, which was very strange. I suppose I was so unhappy that I was a little 'fey,' as my Scotch ancestors would have it. I had to follow, though I was afraid they would turn and see me. But I had to follow Manuelo Ortiz. I pitied him. I wish—he pitied me."

"Does it matter?" I asked gently.

It matters—terribly!" Mabel cried. "If he pitied me, he might think kindly of me—or gently. But I'm afraid he only thinks badly."

"You left them going to meet—someone," I interrupted practically.

"Yes. I hoped it would be Dick. But, hiding across the tracks, behind a manzanita bush, I saw the train come in. It was Rosa they met."

"I saw them clatter away to the Rancho next morning. I was hiding behind the shutters in a dark little room where they went. And young Ortiz was saying—singing like a thrush. I saw him when he rode jangling back into town two days later. His face was glowing. I wondered why. I still wonder. But it didn't matter then, except in the moment when I stopped it and thought he had grown from boyhood to manhood, flowering suddenly like the plants down there in the tropics.

"The next day Dick came. A spy for whom I was paying what I should have spent for food, told me. At dark I went to him. I thought he would make up to me for letting me be branded a thief—by marrying me. I asked him to. I loved him enough for that."

"You were very young," I murmured.

Never Young Again

"I was never—young again," replied Mabel, laughing bitterly.

"He told you—he didn't care?" I gasped, hoping he had been at least merciful enough for that.

"He said—marriage was not for him," was torn from Mabel. "So I turned to go out of his room, and he followed me—and seized me in his arms. I thought he had changed. I thought he loved me enough to take me to the priest. So I clung to him. Then I found he was only—amusing himself. So I fought to get away. I fought so he had to let me go. I hurried down, and even then I went across the street to see if I could get one last look at him there in his room. I could see plainly, for the blinds were back. Anyone who'd been standing where I was could have seen me—in Dick's arms."

"But there was no one," I grasped.

"Manuelo Ortiz was there," said Mabel, simply.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires 4¼ yards of 36-inch material. The width at the foot is about 2½ yards.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

Nineteen Years Apart

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and people say I have a well developed mind. I am in love with a man nineteen years my senior. I suppose that spells trouble already, but besides that he is my father's cousin and my parents think we are too closely related.

I love him dearly, he loves me and I know we would be happy together, but I want to settle the question of age and relationship once and for all and am eagerly awaiting your answer.

M. L.

MODERN theories hold that even first cousin marriages are eugenically acceptible if the cousins come from good stock. When cousins marry and both branches of the family have had heritages then the children are likely to pay. From this you will see that your relationship is no argument against your marriage. As for the difference in age, then especially husband and wife have a better chance of happiness together when they belong to the same generation. But frequently great happiness comes to two who are far apart in years but close in all else. No outsider can settle your problem. It depends on you. If this is a love based on sympathy, understanding and a deep devotion, it is right for you both. If it is mere infatuation—or due to propinquity, there is danger ahead. Why not put it to the test of a year's time?

THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR By PETER B. KYNE

START THIS NEW STORY TODAY

The story opens on the Rancho Palomar, an extensive tract in Southern California. It is the estate of the Farrels, an ancient California family dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, and enlivened with a dash of Irish.

Old Don Miguel Farrel, alone on the heavily mortgaged rancho with only his last faithful retainer, Pablo Artelan, and the latter's expansive wife, receives a telegram from the War Department at Washington announcing the death in battle in Siberia of his only son, "Don Mike."

False news, as the subsequent scene at the Presidio army fields shows, here "Don Mike" is mustered out of the service. On the train homeward bound, he encounters a party of three—an overbearing, wealthy Japanese, a prosperous-appearing American with a down-East accent, and the latter's beautiful daughter. He has dinner with the daughter.

Don Mike grieves over the newly-made grave of his father.

See the story in pictures at Loew's Orpheum next Monday. It is a Cosmopolitan Production, direction of Frank Borzage, and featuring Forrest Stanley and Marjorie Daw. It is released as a Paramount picture.

TO her amazement, the girl detected a mistiness in his eyes, and her generous heart warmed to him.

"How profoundly happy you are!" she commented.

"Happy? I should tell a man! I'm as happy as a cock valley quail with a large family and no coyotes in sight. Wow! This steak is good."

"Not very, I think. It's tough."

"I have good teeth."

Ate in Silence

She permitted him to eat in silence for several minutes, and when he had disposed of the steak, she asked,

"You live in the San Gregorio valley?"

He nodded.

"We have a ranch there also," she volunteered. "Father acquired it recently."

"From whom did he acquire it?"

"I do not know the man's name, but the ranch is one of those old Mexican grants. It has a Spanish name. I'll try to remember it." She knitted her delicate brows. "It's Pal-something or other."

"Is it the Palomares grant?" he suggested.

"I think it is. I know the former owner is dead, and my father is suing the ranch for foreclosure of mortgage on the estate."

"Then it's the Palomares grant. My father wrote in his last letter that old man Gonzales had died and that a suit to foreclose the mortgage had been entered against the estate. The eastern edge of that grant laps over the lower end of the San Gregorio. Is your father a banker?"

"He controls the First National Bank of El Toro."

"That settles the identity of the ranch. Gonzales was mortgaged to the First National." He smiled a trifle foolishly. "You give me a bad ten seconds," he explained. "I thought you meant my father's ranch at first."

"Horrible!" She favored him with a delightful little grimace of sympathy. "Just think of coming home and finding yourself homeless!"

"I think such a condition would make me wish that Russian had been given time to finish what he started. By the way, I knew all of the stockholders in the First National Bank of El Toro. Your father is a newcomer. He must have bought out old Dan Hayes' interest. She nodded affirmatively. "Am I at liberty to be inquisitive—just a little bit?" he queried.

Member of Party.

"That depends, Sergeant. Ask your question, and if I feel at liberty to answer it, I shall."

"Is that Japanese Okada a member of your party?"

"Yes; he is traveling with us. He has a land-deal on with my father."

"Ah!"

"Is it true, then, that there is a real Japanese problem out here?"

"Why, I thought everybody knew that," he replied, a trifle reproachfully. "As the outpost of Occidental civilization, we've been battling Oriental aggression for forty years."

"I had thought this agitation largely the mouthings of professional agitators—a part of the labor-leaders' plan to pose as the watch-dogs of the rights of the California laboring man."

"That is sheer buncombe carefully fostered by a very efficient corps of Japanese propagandists. The resentment against the Japanese invasion of California is not confined to any class, but is a very vital issue with every white citizen of the state who has reached the age of reason and regardless of whether he was born in California or Timbuctoo. Look!"

He pointed to a huge sign board fronting a bend in the highway that ran close to the railroad track and paralled with it:

No More Japs Wanted Here.

"This is entirely an agricultural section," he explained. "There are no labor-unions here. But," he added bitterly, "you could throw a stone in the air and be moderately sure on the small end of a lot that the stone would land on a Jap farmer."

Not Frightened.

"Do the white farmers think that sign will frighten them away?"

"No; of course not. That sign is merely a polite intimation to white men who may contemplate selling or leasing their lands to Japs that the organized sentiment of this community is against such a course. The lower standards of living of the Oriental enables him to pay much higher prices for land than a white man can."

"But," she persisted, "these aliens have a legal right to own and lease land in this State, have they not?"

"Unfortunately, through the treachery of white lawyers, they have declared means to comply with the letter of the law denying them the right to own land, while evading the spirit of that law. Corporations with white dummy directors—purchasers by alien Japs in the names of their infants in arms who happen to have been born in this country—" he shrugged.

"Then you should amend your laws."

He looked at her with the faintest hint of cool belligerence in his fine dark eyes.

"Every time we Californians try to enact a law calculated to keep our State a white man's country, you Easterners, who know nothing of our problem, and are too lethargic long to read up on it, permit yourselves to be stampeded by that hoary shibboleth of strained diplomatic relations with the Mikado's government. Pressure is brought to bear on us from the seat of the national government; the President sends us a message to proceed cautiously, and our loyalty to the sisterhood of States is used as a club to beat our brains out. Once, when we were all primed to settle this issue decisively, the immortal Theodore Roosevelt—our two-fisted, non-bluffable President at that time—made us call off our dogs.

"Later, when again we began to squirm under our burden, the Secretary of State pacific William J. Bryan, hurried out to our State capital, held up both pious hands, and cried: Oh, no! Really, you mustn't'. We must do that you consider the other members of the family. Withhold this radical legislation until we can settle this row amicably. Well, we were dutiful sons.

"We tried out the gentleman's agreement supposed on us in 1907, but when, in 1913, we knew it for a failure, we passed our Alien Land Bill, which hampered but did not prevent, although we know from experience that the class of Jap who have a stranglehold on California are not gentlemen but coolies, and never respect an agreement they can break if, in the breaking, they are financially benefited."

Fine for Japs.

"Well," the girl queried, a little subdued by his vehemence, "how has that law worked out?"

"Fine—for the Japs. The Japanese population of California has doubled in five years; the area of fertile lands under their domination has increased a thousand-fold, until 15 per cent. of the vegetables raised in this State are controlled by the Japs. They are not a dull people, and they know how to make that control yield rich dividends—at the expense of the white race. That man Okada is called 'the potato baron' because presently he will actually control the potato crop of central California—and that is where most of the potatoes of this State are raised. Which reminds me that I started to ask you a question about him. Do you happen to know if he is contemplating expanding his enterprise to include a section of southern California?"

"I suppose I ought not discuss my father's business affairs with a stranger," she replied, "but since he is making no secret of them, I dare say I do not violate his confidence when I tell you that he has a deal on with Mr. Okada to colonize the San Gregorio valley in San Marcos County."

The look of a thousand devils leaped into Farrel's eyes. The storm of passion that swept him was truly Latin in its terrible intensity. He glared at the girl with a malevolence that terrified her.

"My valley!" he managed to murmur presently. "My beautiful San Gregorio! Japs! Japs!"

"I hadn't the faintest idea that information would upset you so,"

Loves Every Rock.

"I—I come from the San Gregorio," he cried passionately. "I love every rock and cactus and rattlesnake in it. Yangana Dios!" And the maimed right hand twisted and clutched as, subconsciously, he strove to clench his fist. "Ah, who was the coward—who was the traitor that betrayed us for a handful of silver?"

"I—I believe there is a great deal of the Latin about you," she said demurely. "If I had a temper as volcanic as yours, I would never, never go armed."

"I could kill with my naked hands the white man who betrays his community to a Jap. Madre de Dios, how I hate them!"

"Well, wait until your trusty right hand is healed before you try garroting anybody," she suggested dryly. "Suppose you cool off, Mr. Pepper-pot, and tell me more about this terrible menace?"

"You are interested—really?"

"I could be made to listen without interrupting you, if you could bring yourself to cease glaring at me with those terrible chile-con-carne eyes. I can almost see myself at my own funeral. Please remember that I have nothing whatsoever to do with my father's business affairs."

"Your father looks like a human being, and if he realized the economic crime he is fostering—"

"Easy, soldier! You're discussing my father, whereas I desire to discuss the Yellow Peril. To begin, are you prejudiced against a citizen of Japan just because he's a Jap?"

Face Brightened.

"I will be frank. I do not like the race. As a white man, there is nothing lovable about a Jap, nothing that would lead, except in isolated cases, to a warm friendship between members of our race and theirs. And I dare say the individual Jap has as instinctive a dislike for us as we have for Him."

"Well then, how about John Chinaman?"

His face brightened.

"Oh, a Chinaman is different. He's a regular fellow. You can have a great deal of respect and downright admiration for a Chinaman, even of the coolie class."

"Nevertheless, the Chinese are excluded from California.

He nodded.

"But not because of strong racial prejudice. The Chinese, like any other Oriental, are not assimilable; also, like the Jap and the Hindu, they are smart enough to know a good thing when they see it—and California looks good to everybody. John Chinaman would overrun us if we permitted it, but since he is a mighty decent sort and realizes the sanity of our contention that he is not assimilable with us, or we with him, he admires the wisdom and justice of our slogan: 'California for white men.' There was no protest from Peking when we passed the Exclusion Act. Now, however, when we endeavor to exclude Japanese, Tokio throws a fit. But if we can muster enough courage among our State Legislature to pass a law that will absolutely divorce the Japanese coolie from California land, we can cope with him in other lines of trade."

She had listened earnestly to his argument, delivered with all the earnestness of which he was capable.

Has the Answer.

"Why is he not assimilable?" she asked.

"Would you marry the potato baron?" he demanded bluntly.

"Certainly not!" she answered. "He has gobs of money. He is not a point worthy of consideration!"

"Not with me. It never could be."

"Pe haps you have gobs of money also."

"If I were a scrubwoman and starving, I wouldn't consider a proposal of marriage from the Jap sufficiently long to reject it."

"Then you have answered your own question," he reminded her triumphantly. "The purity of our race—aye, the purity of the Japanese race—forbids intermarriage, hence we are confronted with the intolerable prospect of sharing our wonderful State with an alien race that must forever remain alien—in thought, language, morals, religion, patriotism and standard of living. They will dominate us because they are a dominant people; they will shoulder us aside, control us, dictate to us, and we shall disappear from this beautiful land as surely and as swiftly as did the Mission Indian. While the south has its negro problem—and a very sorry problem it is—we Californians have had an infinitely more dangerous problem thrust upon us. We've got to attack them off. We've got to!"

"I'll speak to my father. I do not think he understands—that he fully realizes—"

"Ah! Thank you so much. Your father is rich, is he not?"

"I think he possess more money than he will ever need," she replied soberly.

She Hesitated.

"Please try to make him see that the big American thing to do would be to colonize the land in the San Gregorio for white men and take a lesser profit. Really, I do not relish the idea of Japanese neighbors."

"You live there, then?"

He nodded.

"Hope to die there, too. You leave the train at El Toro, I suppose?"

"My father has telegraphed mother to have the car meet us there. We shall motor out to the ranch. And are you alighting at El Toro also?"

"No. I plan to pile off at Sespe, away up the line, and take a short cut via a cattle-trail over the hills. I'll hike it."

She hesitated slightly. Then:

"I am sure father would be very happy to give you a lift out from El Toro, Sergeant. We shall have ourselves room."

"Thank you. You are very kind. But the fact is," he went on to explain, "nobody knows I'm coming home, and I have a childish desire to sneak in the back way and surprise them. Were I to appear in El Toro, I'd have to shake hands with everybody in town and relate a history of my exploits and——"

"I understand perfectly. You just want to get home, don't you?" And she bent upon him a smile of complete understanding—a smile all-compelling, maternal. "But did you say you'd hike it in from Sespe? Why not hire a horse?"

"I'd like to have a horse, and if I cared to ask for one I could borrow one. But I'll hike it instead. It will be easy in light marching order."

"Speaking of horses," she said abruptly, "Do you know a horse in the San Gregorio named Panchito?"

"A very dark chestnut with silver mane and tail, five-gaited, and as stylish as a lady?"

"The very same."

"I should say I do know that horse! What about him?"

"My father is going to buy him for me."

This was news, and Farrel's manner indicated as much.

"Where did you see Panchito?" he demanded.

"An Indian named Pablo rode him into El Toro to be shod one day while we were living at the hotel there. He's profectly adorable."

"Pablo! Hardly. I know the old rascal."

"Be serious, Panchito—I was passing the blacksmith's shop and I simply had to step in and admire him."

Rode Panchito.

"It did. He put Panchito through all of his tricks for me, and, after the horse was shod, he permitted me to ride the dear for half an hour. Pablo was so kind! He waited until I could run back to the hotel and change into my riding habit."

"Did you try to give Pablo some money—say about five dollars?" he demanded, smilingly.

"Yes." Her eyes betrayed wonder.

"He declined it with profuse thanks, didn't he?"

"You're the queerest man I've ever met. Pablo did refuse it. How did you know?"

"I know Pablo. He wouldn't take money from a lady. It's against the code of the Rancho Palomar, and if his boss overheard that he had fractured that code, he'd skin him alive."

"Not Pablo's boss. Pablo told me his Don Mike, as he calls him, was killed by the bewhiskered devils in a cold country the name of which he had heard but could not remember. He meant Siberia."

Farrel sat up suddenly.

"What's that?" he cried sharply. "He told you Don Mike had been killed?"

"Yes—poor fellow! Pablo—or Don Mike's father had had a telegram from the War Department."

Farrel's first impulse was to curse the War Department and Spanish, so she would not understand. His second was to laugh and his third to burst into tears. How his boy had suffered! Then he remembered that tonight he, the real Don Mike, was to have the proud privilege of returning from Valhalla, of bringing the light of joy back to the faded eyes of old Don Miguel, and in the swift contemplation of the drama and the comedy impending, he stood staring at her rather stupidly.

Pablo would doubtless believe he was a ghost returned to haunt old scenes; the majordomo would make the sign of the cross and start running, never pausing till he would reach the Mission of the Mother of Sorrows, there to pour forth his unbelievable tale to Father Dominic. Whereupon Father Dominic would spring into his prehistoric automobile and come up to investigate. Great jumped-up Jehoshaphat! What a climax to two years of soldiering!

Knew Him Well.

"Wha—what—why—do you mean to tell me poor old Mike Farrel has lost the number of his mess?" he blurted. "Great snakes! That news breaks me all up in business."

"You knew him well, then?"

"Knew him? Why I ate with him, slept with him, rode with him, went to school with him. Know him? I should tell a man! We even soldiered together in Siberia; but, strange to say, I hadn't heard of his death."

"Judging by all the nice things I heard about him in El Toro, his death was a genuine loss to his section of the country. Everybody appears to have known him and loved him."

"One has to die before his virtues are apparent to some people," Farrel murmured philosophically. "And now that Don Mike Farrel is dead, you hope to acquire Panchito, eh?"

"I'll be broken-hearted if I cannot."

"He'll cost you a lot of money."

"He's worth a lot of money."

He gazed at her very solemnly.

"I am aware that in Siberia I am about to say is but poor return for your sweet courtesy, but I feel sure that you might as well make up to abandon all hope of ever owning Panchito."

"Why?"

"I—I hate to tell you this—the fact is—I'm going to own him."

She shook her head and smiled at him—the superior smile of one quite conscious of her strength.

"He is to be sold at public auction," she informed him. "And the man who outbids me for that horse will have to mortgage his ranch and borrow money on his Liberty Bonds."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

PE-RU-NA

"Fine for COLDS, GRIP and FLU"

The opinion of Mr. J. O. Sexton, R. F. D. No. 2, Grassy Creek, North Carolina. He says: "I have used Pe-ru-na for the last two years and received great benefit. It is fine for colds, grip and flu. I can recommend Pe-ru-na most highly."

Just a few doses of Pe-ru-na soon after exposure or first manifestation of trouble will usually break a cold or dissipate a persistent cough.

Two generations have known Pe-ru-na in its astonishing administration to catarrhal diseases.

General List Higher Under Leadership of U. S. Steel, at New Recent Top

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

D'ye know I'm inclined to think that workmen read more than business men?

James Couzens, now Senator, told me the other day that he would rather take the judgment of 40,000 workers than the judgment of 40,000 of our most prominent business leaders any day of the week. He added that these men less selfishness among working men than among capitalists.

* * *

Thousands and thousands of letters pour in to me every year, and, while some of them betray utterly unsound reasoning on economic subjects, yet a very large percentage of those from workers reveal a high order of intelligence. Incidentally, I have a higher regard for, and more faith in, the rank and file of the workers than I have for many of their professional leaders.

* * *

Read this letter from a workman in Hayden, Arizona, who endorses the column I recently wrote explaining that the only wage workers could permanently hope to receive was the wage they earn, the earned wage:

"I have been a constant reader of your interesting articles for a long time and in all of them you have spoken of an 'earned' wage, but in none so explicitly as in the one enclosed. We working men have discussed your articles many times, and, of course, have had about as many opinions.

"Some time past you wrote an article on the twelve-hour day, and you spoke of interviewing a steel trust man and calling his attention to the fact that at Ford's plant the men work eight hours and receive almost twice as much pay. There are two concerns here that are paying dividends and doing practically the same thing. The earned wage should be the same, for in both cases they are doing all they can, but in one case the earned wage is based on the money actually invested, while in the other it is based on at least 50 per cent. watered stock. The same is true of all railroads and most large corporations.

"Now comes these immense stock dividends, for this stock must have a dividend in the future. Then this earned wage, which does exist and is doing its best, will have to be reduced materially to create, mark the word a dividend for something that never was a part of the investment of the corporation and is worse than water.

"Please write something along these lines. I feel that your articles can do a great deal to right this situation and do, oh, so much for humanity."

Frankly, I sympathize with this workman's objections to the present wholesale inflation of the capital stock of corporations through the declaration of huge stock dividends.

* * *

These dividends, in most cases, have not been instituted by sound financial principles or policies. They have been instituted, rather by fear, by a foreboding that the radical politicians are making heavy taxes upon the suspicious profits of corporations, or something else along this line.

* * *

I'm not a lawyer, but I very much doubt whether the courts now have so excellently and spectacularly followed will prevent our law-makers from carrying out whatever designs they may have in mind. Laws sometimes can be made retroactive. And there are other things besides a surplus that can be levied upon if the tax payers are determined to "get at" corporations.

IRREGULARITY MARKS MOVES IN RAILROADS

Under leadership of U. S. Steel, which continued to a new high on the current move, the general list worked upward on the New York Stock Exchange. Money renewed at 4 per cent. Irregularity marked the movements in rails.

Fisher Body was up 5 points to a new high for 1922. Pigeli-Wright slumped more than 10 points before rallying. National Lead sagged over 4 points on announcement that bears would make no immediate action on question of stock dividend.

Offerings of speculative favorites like Baldwin, Studebaker and Pan-American at considerable recessions from Wednesday's final figures undermined bullish confidence until well into afternoon.

Heavy buying of Crucible Steel on an advance of 2 points caused a sympathetic rally in all quarters. International Harvester, Tobacco Products and Pressed Steel Car moved up materially.

Bond price trend in a hesitant manner. Foreign securities kept within narrow limits. United Kingdom 5½s of 1929 improving slightly. Rio de Janeiro 8s and Bogota 8s were relatively backward.

'FRISCO LINE TO GET OUTLET AT GALVESTON

The first merger of independent railroad companies since the plan of the Interstate Commerce Commission to group the carriers of the United States in a number of competing systems, was announced as virtually complete, when E. N. Brown, chairman of the board of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company, made public the purchase of the International-Great Northern Railroad Company by the former road.

The purchase of the International-Great Northern gives for the St. Louis-San Francisco an outlet into the Gulf of Mexico at Galveston. The fact that under the merger plan suggested by the Interstate Commerce Commission the two systems are placed in different groups is considered by many to mean the consolidations of the commission may be extended.

Stock and bond capitalization of the two roads totals $404 537,169, of which $7,500,000 is capital stock of the International-Great Northern and $37,000,000 in bonds. St. Louis-San Francisco has a funded debt of $29,421,549 and stock outstanding of $66,815,674.

The statement of December 31, 1921, showed that the St. Louis-San Francisco Company owned and operated 2,256 miles of first line track and 92.03 of second track, 1,756 of sidings and trackage rights on 94.92 miles. Equipment included 382 locomotives, 87,816 freight cars, 952 passenger cars and 1,349 service cars.

International-Great Northern at the end of 1920 owned and operated 175 locomotives, 119 passenger cars, 4,615 freight cars and 804 service cars. The company operates 827.57 miles of side track, and owns 1,106 miles of road. The total mileage operated is 1,145.

Boston Notes

CHILE—ANACONDA merger deal is reported still in a tangle. Owners of Chile are said to want to give part cash and part Anaconda stock, while Chile interests want all in cash.

ATCHISON'S loadings for 1922 to date are given as 1,676,518 cars against 1,307,599 a year ago.

CHILE will probably produce in the last three months of 1922 over 60,000,000 pounds of copper, bringing output for 1922 to above 130,000,000 pounds.

KENNECOTT earnings are being stimulated by dividends from Utah Copper and Mother Lode in which Kennecott has a substantial interest.

BUTTE & SUPERIOR, owing to condition of the zinc market, was forced to shut down its property in December, 1920, until January 16 this year. Since then earnings have shown steady improvement.

WHILE UNITED Verde Extension for years has been pulling from its high-grade ore reserves, there is still a wealth of copper ore underground above 1500 foot level. As of December 31, 1921, blocked out ore totaled 1,127,000 tons, averaging 11⅞ per cent. copper and 2¼ ounces of silver per ton.

NIPISSING Mines Co., Ltd., (operating company) as of December 9 had cash in bank, Canadian and bonds, United States Treasury certificates and investments aggregating $3,326,994. Value of ore and bullion in transit, on hand and in process at mine and mill, and bullion ready for shipment, was $711,167.

BURNS BROS.' capital readjustment is expected to be followed by entry of this coal firm into Boston and other branch fields.

BIGELOW-HARTFORD Carpet is quoted 139 bid, a new record high.

NASH MOTORS sold at 625 and was quoted 625 to 675. The new stock at 49½ to 49, against sales at 60½ to 64¾ Tuesday. The new preferred was quoted 99 to 101.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—Nothing suggests beginning an overdue reaction except failure of certain leading stocks to make any new advance although active and the specialty character of trading.

The Opener of Gates

The One Thing a Man or Boy Wants Is a Chance

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Recently there was dedicated at Saratoga Springs the Katrina Trask Gateway to the city park, in memory of Mrs. George Foster Peabody, who was Mrs. Katrina Trask.

The gate was presented to the city by the members of the Trask estate in memory of their mistress.

In speaking of Katrina Trask, Mr. Peabody said that she "was ever an opener of gates, seeking to show others the way of entrance into a richer life. She was not a breaker down of fences nor remover of ancient landmarks."

Whoever makes an opportunity for another is an opener of gates. Everyone of us can look back to some critical hour when a kindly hand undid the latch which let us in to a coveted field.

Gene Buck, the genius of the Follies, is fond of using a homely phrase which expresses the disposition to helpfulness: "Give the kid a chance."

All the right kind of person wants is to make good, and about all that we can do to help him is to open the gate.

Significance of Watson and Brickley Vote

The Continuance of Fight for Lower Electric Light Rates Endorsed by the People

Councillor Watson's splendid victory indicates how the people of Boston feel concerning the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. He led the whole of the long ticket and he made his campaign on the proposition that we must carry on the fight against the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. INDEED, ALL THE THREE NEW VICTORIOUS CANDIDATES TO THE CITY COUNCIL ARE PLEDGED TO THAT PROPOSITION.

Mr. Brickley was loyal to the fight from the beginning and Mr. Healey pledged himself to carry on the fight. Every one of those who were pledged to go on with the fight against the Electric Light Trust led the ticket. There were five of them so pledged, and those five were the first five on the ticket of twenty-five candidates.

We think that the people of Boston have spoken quite emphatically on that question. Who ever doubted that they would not?

Brickley's Re-election

The re-election of Councillor Brickley by the next largest vote cast indicates the folly of the Good Government's assumption that Mr. Brickley had been proved guilty of the charges made against him. We very much fear that in the case of the Good Government, the wish was father of the thought.

We do not want to accuse the officials of the Good Government with insincerity or lack of public spirit. Indeed, we believe according to their light they act in the public interest, but they have their prejudices, and like the rest of humanity, they do not always keep that vice under control.

In the meantime, we congratulate Captain Brickley.

Flanking Movement

Progressives Fear Masked Attack by Privilege

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

At the edge of a throng a quarrel breaks out. Two men begin to berate each other and to threaten dire punishments. The people turn, crane their necks and listen, mouths agape—and sneak thieves pick their pockets.

It is a trick as old as sin in man, yet it rarely fails to work.

Progressive leaders are expecting some such diversion two years hence at the expense of what they call the "bread and butter" issues. They foresee a wrangle over wet vs. dry, and fear it will mask a flanking movement by privilege.

That may easily be; it has happened before.

There is no way to prevent it except by making the "bread and butter" issues so clear that the people's attention cannot be diverted.

New University Club

If energy and industry will make the building of the new University Club a success, it is bound to be a success in the hands of J. W. Powell of Quincy. We know few men as enthusiastic and energetic in this country as he.

The plan is very attractive and without doubt will meet the overwhelming approval not only of college men of the community, but of everyone who wants to see this community progress.

Private Hospital Probe

Councillor Watson's request that the Law Department investigate the private hospitals for the care of the insane to learn whether or not any inmates are there who ought not to be there is a good idea if there is no provision for such public inquiry already.

Indeed, there ought to be a standing provision for regular inquiry into private institutions for the care of the insane to learn how they are treated and to be sure that they are all properly there.

WORDS FROM THE LIPS OF WISE MEN

A man of integrity will never listen to any reason against conscience.

• • •

Guilt, though it may attain temporal splendor, can never confer real happiness.

• • •

There is no lasting pleasure but contemplation—all others grow flat and insipid upon frequent use.

• • •

Few things are needed to make a wise man happy—nothing can make a fool content.

• • •

• • •

Malice and hatred are very fretting and apt to make our minds sore and uneasy.

• • •

The habit of virtue cannot be formed in a closet. Habits are formed by acts of reason in a persevering struggle through temptation.

• • •

A man's reputation is like his shadow, which sometimes follows and sometimes precedes him, and which is occasionally longer, occasionally shorter than he is.

• • •

To be popular at home is a great achievement. The man who is loved by the cat, by the dog, by his neighbors' children and by his own wife is a great man, even if he has never been mentioned outside of the circle of those who love him.

• • •

The wise man never works. In the daytime he is too busy, and at night he is too tired.

JAPS LOAF AND SPEND MUCH

HONOLULU, Dec. 14.—Japan is in the throes of a wild orgy of spending and loafing, according to S. Yamamoto, president of the Motoshige Shoten, one of the largest Japanese wholesale establishments in Honolulu, who has just returned from a business trip to the Orient.

Commodities have reached the peak of high prices, and the laboring class of Japan is receiving exorbitant pay. Carpenters in Tokio, according to Yamamoto, receive from four to five yen ($2 to $2.50) a day and refuse to work over five hours. They start to work at 9 o'clock, rarely getting to the job before 10, and at 4 o'clock they quit.

Our Forefathers

Editor Boston American:

About four centuries ago our fathers quit Europe, its tyrants, its slave drivers and its crowned hypocrites and braved the storms of unknown seas to land on a new continent, which at that time was a howling wilderness.

Guided by the love of God and neighbor, they hoisted the flag of liberty and tolerance and by industry and thrift converted that wilderness into the fairest and most peaceable nation on earth. When the tyrants of the Old World sent their agents over here to levy tribute the fathers drove them back across the seas. Then followed a policy of peace and good will toward all nations. We did not plant a single gun along our thousands of miles of border. We became prosperous and great.

Nor can they say we are unsympathetic or selfish. When they were in real danger six years ago, did we not by herculean effort and heroic sacrifice raise an army of three millions and help them destroy the greatest military despotism in history? And then—we came home and minded our own business!

In return, what? They have tried and are trying to draw us into the European quagmire of enmity and hate, of wars for conquest, of bankruptcy and starvation (of endless militarism).

Should we now take advice from foreign rulers who represent a system which for centuries has proved a dismal failure, and which finally brought about the worst catastrophe in history?

Genuine American

Editor Boston American:

The writer, born in England of a French mother and an Italian father is an American first and always and resents the new activities by the pro-Europe press.

It is absurd for any one with good common sense to think that a "League of Nothing" could stop the powers over there from squabbling. If they have such league, I say, "Stay out!" They will always be at odds and that is why we wish to mind our own business.

When the war was on Turkey was to be driven from the map. Now, you see, France caters to the Turk. Why? To get the best of England.

The real American does not want this country to be embroiled in petty jealousies.

BURDEN TOO MUCH FOR MOTHER

By Winifred Black

SHE'S had a pretty hard time in life, the rather nice woman I know.

Oh, anyhow, she thinks she has, and, after all, what you think about it seems to be the principal thing!

She was the daughter of a clever man who drank and a pretty woman, who cried a good deal about the drinking.

And then daughter grew up and she married a man who drank.

But she was a clever woman, and she got into some work which suited her exactly, and she made money and friends, and she began to wear pretty clothes. And she sent her children to good schools, and now the oldest two are "out on their own," and the interesting widow has just herself and her little boy to look after, and she is again becoming plump and rosy and smiling.

Yesterday I met the Interesting Widow and she looked as if some one had slapped her in the face.

"Where's the nearest telegraph office?" she asked breathlessly. "I'm going to telegraph some money to Jim. He's lost his job, and he and his wife and baby are coming home for a while till he gets started again."

"Wife and baby!" I gasped.

"Yes. Doesn't it seem queer!" said the Interesting Widow. "I can't realize it yet. I didn't know he was married, either, till I got the letter about the new baby and his losing his job, and all that."

Is she really doing the best thing for Jimmy, or for the wife and baby?

Something to Think About

LIONS AND DOGS

By Bruno Lessing

FOR several days a section of southwestern Michigan was agitated over the report of a lion having been seen roaming about the fields. People were afraid to go abroad. Schools were closed. Searching parties, armed with guns and revolvers, searched brush and woods for the ferocious beast. And then it turned out that the lion was nothing more than a big, fierce-looking dog who wagged his tail when anyone patted his head.

Isn't it a peach of a parable? How many of the lions that bother and worry us turn out, in the end, to be merely dogs? Look back over your career and review the times when you were terribly worried over some domestic or financial or social or physiological lion. How you lay awake at night, chewing the cud of worry. How you feared to confront your trouble. How you went through the entire gamut of fear, from dread to absolute misery.

And, in the end, it turned out to be merely a dog—probably a little poodle at that.

I truly believe that most of us suffer more misery from phantom fears and groundless worry than we do from the real mishaps of life. Our troubles, we are absolutely sure, are raging lions. Clear an our mind may be to realize the absurdities of other people's fear, it seems unable to cope with our own.

In most cases the origin of fear can be traced to ignorance and cowardice. Knowing the origin, it ought not to be difficult for us to find the remedy.

To those who brood and worry—which, you know, generates real poison in their bodies—I recommend Ella Wheeler Wilcox's famous poem, "Solitude." Too, Shall Pass Away." It tells of a monarch who offered a reward for a motto that would soothe his forlorn hours and selected the one which gives its title to the poem.

Since life is brief we need to make it bright.
Then keep the old king's motto well in sight,
And let its meaning permeate each day.
Whatever comes, this, too, shall pass away.

And don't forget the lion and the dog.

ATHLETICS GOOD FOR HEART

PARIS, Dec. 14.—Athletics do not unduly affect the heart, according to a commission headed by Professor Maurice Bolgey of the Academy of Medicine, after tests on athletes immediately following their performances.

Tests were made on champion runners, jumpers, hurdlers, javelin hurlers and bicycle riders.

"Hypertrophia resulting from athletic exertion is a normal reaction of the heart and works absolutely no harm," declared the doctor afterward. "I have no hesitation in indorsing athletics as beneficial to the body and mind of both men and women."

SEEN AND HEARD

"THE Psychic Complex" is the title of a sermon announced in front of a church on Bowdoin street, on a bulletin board. ROGER W. BABSON, the statistician, came along and was stunned by the subject, which he afterwards quoted in his address before the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall, but even these ministers could not throw light upon that subject. The statistician was floored for once.

CAPTAIN A. V. BROWER, the requiring millionaire officer of the First Corps Area, who turned over his salary to his chauffeur during part of the World War, has been relieved from duty after a very successful career in the department of the quartermaster.

It is not often that an attorney will congratulate a police officer for arresting his client. But the exception appeared at the recent Bartlett murder trial. ATTORNEY J. E. O'CONNELL, counsel for Bartlett, during the cross-examination of OFFICER JOHN CAVANAUGH of Station 9, said: "I want to congratulate you on your efficient and fearless work in capturing this man." CAVANAUGH ignored BARTLETT'S gun and captured him after a chase.

Boston's busiest physician is probably DR. GEORGE S. HILL, chairman of the Christmas Seal Committee of the Boston Tuberculosis Association. He has the task of superintending mailing of many thousands of seals to charitable folk aiding in keeping up the children's health camp at Mattapan.

Rhode Island leads all other States in America with foreign stock having 65 per cent. of the population; Massachusetts follows with 60 per cent.; Connecticut with 55 per cent and New York with 52 per cent., according to ROGER W. BABSON, Boston's well-known statistician.

A Presidential boom for SENATOR LA FOLLETTE is being marshalled in this State by ATTORNEY OBERT SLETTEN. SLETTEN has long been an admirer and confidant of "FIGHTING BOB."

REPRESENTATIVE ELMER E. DAWSON and Senator-elect Edward Cox of Winthrop are members of a committee of Winthrop property owners who are planning to seek State appropriation for a rip-rap to protect the State boulevard along the seven-eighths mile stretch from Great Head to Winthrop Highlands.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON PASSAGE OF HEAT

By Garrett P. Serviss

"It seems perfectly logical to me that the temperature of a heated iron rod should throttle down to that of the surrounding air, but I can't quite understand just what it is that robs the earth of the heat continually being generated by the energy from the sun, because the only agent in contact with the earth is the ether, which is supposed to be a vacuum, and a vacuum, if I am informed correctly, can neither retain nor transmit heat."—R. W., Philadelphia.

BECAUSE I have before me evidence that many others entertain the same erroneous view that puzzles you concerning the passage of heat through a "vacuum," I think it worth while to explain as clearly as possible the manner in which heat is transferred.

Now, heat is transferred in three ways: (1) By conduction, in which process the heat glows, or spreads, from particle to particle of a heated body. Thus, if you heat one end of a poker in the fire, the heat will spread more or less rapidly through the poker, passing from atom to atom, until it reaches the end that you hold in your hand.

(2) Heat is transferred by convection. In this process the heat is carried by the actual change of place of the heated particles. Examples are the heating of a pot of water by placing it on a stove, and the heating of a system of pipes by a current of hot water, or of steam, passing through them. In convection the heat is actually carried from place to place ("conveho," to carry). When the pot of water is heated from the bottom the heat is spread by the heated particles rising in "convection currents."

(3) The third principal way in which heat is transferred is by radiation. This is the special case with which we have to deal in considering how the earth is warmed by the sun, and how it gets rid of a large part of the heat thus received. Its average temperature representing a balance between the inflow and outflow of solar heat.

Radiation is conducted entirely through the ether, that is, through what you call a vacuum. But, in reality, we have no experimental knowledge of a true vacuum. Whatever the ether may be, at any rate it serves as a medium capable of conveying, or transmitting, waves of energy, including those which are transformable into light.

The heated body transfers its vibrations to the ether, and by the ether they are transmitted through space. They are not heat when they are passing through the ether, but they take the form of heat when they meet and are absorbed by a body like the earth.

These same waves which are transformable into heat are accompanied by others, of a shorter length and greater frequency of vibration, which are transformable into light. Without what we call the ether, as far as we know, the sun could not send one particle to the earth, and the earth could not be "robbed" of the heat that it receives. Space is not occupied only by other gases, so far as our senses can tell, but is a vacuum. But, though it is of interest that we can say this, which we have any knowledge at the same time it is the heat medium for the transfer of the vibrations that cause heat.

Surround the earth with a material blanket and the escape of heat would be prevented. This state of affairs is, indeed, partially produced by the atmosphere and its gaseous contents. If a planet has not even an atmosphere, as is practically the case of the moon, it parts with its heat far more rapidly than the earth does, notwithstanding that the space around it contains only ether and is therefore in the state of what we call perfect vacuum, simply because we find in it nothing that our senses recognize as matter.

THREE-MINUTE JOURNEYS

By TEMPLE MANNING

WHERE TRIAL BY ORDEAL IS STILL PRACTICED.

IT is a far cry from the "ordeal" of early England to the judicial system, if one might call it that, in Central Africa of today.

Trial by ordeal flourished all over the world in ancient times, and persisted in England until our present civilization, when courts of law took the place of these crude and cruel methods of determining the guilt or innocence of one accused of a crime.

There are very few places where such a savage state now exists, of course, only regions where there is no form of government except that of the native themselves.

Perhaps the untrained and uncivilized mind of the human being is the same no matter in what year or in what land it is found. The tribes of Central Africa still employ the methods that the early inhabitants of northern Europe did before they were refined and educated up to the point of having laws and abiding by them.

An example of a tribe which still practices one of the most ancient methods of determining justice is the Wakamba tribe of Central Africa. These people have many primitive methods of life and thought, but none is more interesting than their mode of justice.

If a man has committed a crime, he is brought before the leaders of the tribe, who are grouped about the medicine man.

Over a very hot fire the medicine man heats to a white heat a piece of iron. The culprit waits and watches it turn from black to bright red, then white. It is prepared to test his innocence or guilt.

If he appears to be hurt he is judged to be guilty.

If he shows no pain he is acquitted, released and congratulated.
